Two words are said in rhyme when they end with the same sounds, a very common technique in poetry. Although poems do not always have to be in rhyme, as in the case of free verses or haiku, the rhyme can add beauty and levels of meaning to your poem. When you write a poem in rhyme, rhymes usually follow a pattern. For example, the reason could be that the first line rhymes with the third, and the second line rhymes with the fourth. Or, you could have two consecutive lines rhyming with each other. What is a rhyme scheme? A rhyme scheme is the set of letters that represent the rhyme model of a poem. We call these variables "letter", and we use capital letters to indicate which lines rhyme with each other. For example, if the first line rhymes with the third line, we point to those sounds with the A. Then, if the second line rhymes with the fourth, we point to them with a B. Lea gives me cream with all its strengths to eat with the apple tart "BA" The cow of Robert Louis Stevenson How Do You Find the Rhy Schema of a Poem? If you want to determine what rhyme scheme a poem follows, watch the last sound in the line. Label each new final sound with a new letter. Then, when the same sound occurs in the following lines, use the same letter. It is all the bright and beautiful things A All the big and small creatures BTALL the wise and wonderful things All Signore Dio has done them all. B In this poem by Cecil Alexander, the first line ends with the word "beautiful". Then the next line ends with the word "small", which does not rhyme with "beautiful", so label this line B. Then, the third line ends with the word "wonderful", which rhymes with the last word of the first line, the "beautiful" line ends with the word "hello," which rhymes with the word "small" in the second line. You have to use the same letter as the second line, B. This gives us the ABAB rhyme scheme. What happens if we have more than two pairs of words in rhyme? We would follow the same principle: use a new letter for every new sound and use the same letter for the rhyme words. "Here's an example of William Blake: it's Piping down the wild valleys, it's "A"piping songs of pleasant glee, it's "Good a cloud I saw a baby, it's "Aaaaaa song of a lamb! A CSO I piffuto con cheerfulness. a Itâ The whole tube, your happy tube; It's "FSing your songs of happy cheerfulness! In this example, the first four lines follow the ABAB rhyme scheme. But the next lines are CDEDFD. (The only rhymes are in the lines labeled D.) What is the AABB rhyme scheme? Since every letter in a rhyme pattern refers to a final sound, you can easily see which lines rhyme for that poem. For example, if the given rhyme scheme is AABB, this means that the first two lines rhyme with each other, and the next two lines rhyme with each other. Most rhymes use the Rhyme AABB scheme. For example: is once I saw a small bird Go Hop, Hop, Hop a Aso I said, a Little Bird, will you stop, stop stopping? AAS I was going to the DA window, how do you do it? a B Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star a Ahow I wonder what you are. AUP above the world so high, Blune is a diamond in the sky. Btwinkle, Twinkle, Little Star Ahow I wonder what you are. A Common Rhyme Patterns When you write a poem in rhyme, you do not need to follow a fixed pattern. You can just keep adding new rhymes and keep expanding the template. But some kinds of poems have assigned rhyme schemes. These include: 1. Shakespearean system: this is always Poem of 14 lines divided into three 4-line rooms and a destroyed to finish the piece. The rhyme scheme is CDCD EFEF GG, unique only to the Shakespearean sonnet. 2. Alternate rhyme: In this rhyme scheme, the first line rhymes with the third, and the second line rhymes with the fourth. The ABAB rhyme scheme is common for poems with four lines in each verse. 3. Ballad: This lyrical poem (not to be confused with a ballad) is typically composed of three stanzas of eight lines each and ends with a stanza of four lines. The rhyme scheme for a ballad is ABABCBBC. 4. Coupled rhyme: refers to two consecutive lines that rhyme, usually in two lines. The rhyme scheme is AA BB CC, or any other similar scheme with rhyme pairs. We call these kinds of rhymes "a pair of rhymes" The Shakespearean sonnet always ends with a rhyme verse. Monorhyme: A monorhyme is when all lines of a verse or even a whole poem end with the same sound. The rhyme scheme can be designated as AAAA. 6. Closed Rhyme: In a closed pattern, the first and fourth lines rhyme with each other, while the second and third lines rhyme with each other. The rhyme scheme is ABBA. It is 7. Triplet: A triplet is when three lines of a verse end in the same sound. The rhyme scheme is therefore AAA. 8. Limerick: This humorous poem is available in five lines and an AABBA rhyme scheme. Examples of rhyme schemes in literature Let's take a look at other examples to better understand rhyme schemes: Example #1. William Shakespeare's "Sonnet 18" Would I compare you to a summer? Is it the day? AThou most beautiful and more temperate art: strong winds shake the beloved gems of May, And the summer lease has a date too short; Sometimes too hot the eye of the sky shines, CE often is its golden complexion dimm A d; DE every fair from fair sometimes declines, CBy event or nature A c A's change course untri But your eternal summer will not fade, ENo will lose possession of that just you owe; FNA death boasts you vagabond in her Ewhein in eternal lines a a You grow up: © Men can breathe or eyes can see, until © live this, and this gives you life. G Example 35;2. Dr. Seuss' Green Eggs and Ham. Do you like green eggs and ham? I don't like them, Sam-I-I-Am. Al doesn't like green eggs and ham. Would you like it here or there? BI wouldn't want them here and there. BI wouldn't want them anywhere. BI doesn't like green eggs and ham. I don't like them, Sam-I-I-Am. An example 35;3. "Excelsior" by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow The shadows of the night descended quickly as he crossed an alpine village passed the youth AA, which carried, amidst snow and ice, the BA flag with the strange device, Bu Excelsior! C His forehead was sad; The eye below, whaled like a hawk from its quina, DE like a silver claron played by Him accents of that unknown language, E, Excelsior! C Using rhyme patterns in poetry The rhyme and the subway are two instruments that make poetry the musical experiences that we like so much. When using a regular yarn in a pattern set, it is easier to remember the lines of poetry, and also allows the public to give predictable pleasure and full of expectations. While rhyme scheme is not something that readers normally choose, their decision in choosing which lines should rhyme will give your artistic structure poetry. Did you find this post useful?
