Wall Street Journal Research Monday: Trump came in at 25 percent among first-rate Republican voters - up © 4 percent from September June 24%, but Ben Carson is hot on his heels. Retired neurosurgeon conquered 22 22support, with the gap that separates the two that lie within the margin of error. In September, he arrived at twenty percent and in June he was at eleven percent. Florida Sen. Marco Rubio arrives in third place with thirteen percent. In fourth and fifth places are Texas Sen. Ted Cruz and the ex-Gov. Florida Jeb Bush, nine percent and eight percent, respectively. Bush was the clear front runner at the start of the race with 22 percent in June. Carly Fiorina, who had enjoyed a peak in his number after his strong performances in the first two GOP debates, fell to sixth place in 7 percent. In September, Hewlett-Packard’s former CEO was tied third with Rubio in 11 percent. Former governor of Arkansas, Mike Huckabee, Ohio Gov. John Kasich, Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul and Chris Christie, from the New Jersey government, all searches in three percent or less. The rest of the candidates registered less than one percent. Research has not only shown a dramatic change in numbers since the start of this summer for Bush, it has also found that many voters feel that they cannot see supporting it at all. Bush defeated Trump for most people who didn’t see themselves voting on him, 44 to 36 percent. The next Republican debate of the week in Boulder, Colorado, must still have ten participants, despite the lousy exhibitions of Christie and Paul in the new research. While Christie and Paul slipped to 2.9 percent on the CNBC voting average is using to determine eligibility, they are still above the 2.5 percent threshold needed to win an invitation to the main phase debate. The vote also asked about Congress and the current race for the speakership. Most voters believe that the next speaker should defend his principles rather than compromise, even if that meant less achieved, 56 to 40 percent. Almost two-thirds of primary voters said they would support Rep. Paul Ryan as a speaker. Oof Wisconsin has not yet announced that he is competing, although he is being discussed as one of the uniquely able to Bridge factions inside the party. The vote of 400 Republican primary voters was conducted Oct. 15-18. It has a margin of error of about 4.9 percent. Steven Shepard contributed to this report.
