The great selling point behind downloading movies is convenience. You don't have to get into a car, stand in line, or spend several days waiting while your DVDs travel back and forth between your home and a shipping center. But choosing a service that doesn't meet your needs can make the process pale compared to other methods of buying and renting. The first thing to keep in mind is the platform that the site requires. Most movie sites require Windows XP Some will also work with Windows XP Some will also work with Windows Vista or Windows XP Some will also work with Windows XP Some Media Player. Although you can view most sites in Firefox, the MovieLink site only works with Internet Explorer with ActiveX control enabled. Amazon Unbox requires the Microsoft framework.Net, and Vongo requires the infine from the film studios, which own the digital rights to the films. A website can't offer the movie without first negotiating a deal with the studio. Some sites, like MovieLink, have a selection of free and independent movies as well as studio releases that you can rent for a fee. Vongo is owned by Starz Entertainment, and its selection reflects only what Starz has the right to broadcast. When you find a site with a selection of movies you like, the next thing to watch is the quality of the movies. There are a couple of measures to keep in mind. One is resolution, which is measured in pixels. The higher the resolution, the better the image quality. For example, the movies in the Wal-Mart video download shop have a resolution of 640 x 480 pixels, which is the same as the lowest standard TV resolution. Wal-Mart also offers a smaller version for portable media players with a resolution of 320 x 240 pixels. You can also measure quality in bitrates, often measured in bits per second (bps). The higher the bitrate, the better the quality -- the DVD bitrate is about 5 kilobits per second (kbps), or 5000 bps. The codec, or the program that encodes and decodes digital video, can also significantly affect the quality of video. However, sites do not always specify which codec to use. Finally, before buying or renting movies online, you should read the siteâs Terms of Use carefully and familiarize yourself with its DRM. Some sites are relatively flexible. You can play movies on multiple machines, download them to portable media players and even burn them to DVD. Other sites offer far fewer options â for example, Amazon Unbox received criticism shortly after its launch for perceived inflexibility of its terms of use. Several sites allow you to create a backup disc that will only be played on the computer originally used to download the file. For sites that use streaming media, you never own a copy of the movie, you watch it as it streams. Once you've found a site that meets your criteria for platform, selection, quality and terms of use, a few simple questions can help you make your final choice: How much do movies cost? Are they almost as expensive as DVDs? If so, would you rather find a cheaper alternative or choose a higher quality DVD? Do the rental and purchase options match what you are looking for? Photo Courtesy: Paramount Pictures/IMDb Everyone thinks film making is a great adventure, and sometimes it is. The actors make a lot of money to act in the characters for the camera, and directors and crew members put their talent into creating "movie magic" that makes everything simple and fun. However, some of the most famous movies in history produced productions so challenging and frustrating that everyone feared they would be box office flops or discarded before completion. Take a look at our list of great hit movies that barely made it to the big screen. The Wizard of Oz is an iconic classic, because it's hard to believe that the sparkling spectacle of the MGM of 1939 was almost never realized. Right from the start, it took 17 writers and six directors to get the project done. When the shooting finally started, the shooting was a disaster. Photo Courtesy: Silver Screen Collection/Getty Images The original tin man, Buddy Ebsen, had to be replaced by Jack Haley due to an allergy to aluminum makeup. Dorothy's faithful canine partner, Toto, behaved badly and West Wicked Witch actress Margaret Hamilton was accidentally burned during filming. Despite the difficulties, the film has collected more than 2 million dollars and remains a timeless classic. The 1982 adventure drama Fitzcarraldo had one of the most difficult productions in the history of cinema. The film was director Werner Herzog's crazy story about the real rubber baron Carlos Fermin Fitzcarrald. Shot in South America, one of the movie's most famous scenes involves dragging a giant steamer up a hill. Photo Courtesy: jean-Louis Atlan/Sygma/Getty Images Herzog stubbornly refused to use miniature effects and insisted on filming the scene was a disaster, there were many injured and even dead. The actors suffered from dysentery, and two small plane accidents caused further It's a miracle the movie was completed Rapa-Nui was almost doomed from the start. The 1994 historical drama focuses on the history of Easter Island. Director Kevin Reynolds said: "We had a week a week from the mainland, and there were times that we finished the food to feed people." In addition to shooting challenges, the film has collected only $ 305,000. However, apparently Reynolds did not learn the lesson of him. After this office bomb, he immediately addressed another difficult film: Waterworld. The science fiction of 1995 Thriller Waterworld involved many localities of water shooting, which turned out to be an expensive headache for all the subjects involved. The director Kevin Reynolds and his film crew had to build artificial islands away at sea, which quickly swallowed the budget of $ 100 million. Photo Courtesy: universal actors / getty images, including Kevin Costner, were transported from the dry land towards the resources' resources. Furthermore, Costner is almost dead when he was captured in a squalid. There were also wounded two stuntmen, and the young co-star Tina Maiorino was pungent three times with jellyfish. In the end, Reynolds walked away from the project, and Costner has finished the film itself. It is a miracle that no one has been killed during the realization of the Thriller of the 1981 adventure thriller. The film focuses on the preservation of wildlife Hank (Noel Marshall), which lives with a lion minagerie, tigers and other animals Wild. Marshall, who also wrote, direct and produced the film, has decided to work with more than 100 live animals à ¢ â, ¬ "For Really. The film was a disaster in doing, but it has become an acclaimed film of the 70s. He received $ 750,000 and remains a classic cult until today. James Cameron, 1989 Science fiction drama The abyss was an ambitious project. system has taken 18 months to build. The movie budget was around $ 2 million. Members of the cast and crew have often worked 70 hours a week, and the actors and Harris and Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio were on the verge of a mental collapse. Photo courtesy: 20th century Fox / IMDB at one point, Merantonio screamed at Cameron, "We are not animals!" This was in response to the suggestion of the director that the actors should urinate in their mutes to save time between the preens. While the film was well received critically and blocked $ 90 million, everyone was happy when it was over. Director Richard Stanley desperately wanted to undertake his Dream project: an adaptation of H.G. Wellsà ¢ â, ¬ Â "¢ Novel 'The island of Dr. Moreau. Stanley was particularly electrified when acclaimed the Marlon Brando actor signed to play the title role. But then, three days shown in the 1996 Thriller, Stanley was fired. Photo of courtesy: new line / getty images actor val kilmer can be found with stanley, and the intense topics have brought the to fire him and hire John Frankenheimer as his replacement. However, it was not the end of the problems, as I would have had the kilmer and Branddo did not get along. (Someone who thinks maybe the problem was Kilmer?) Francis Ford Coppola was determined to continue his successful executive after the godfather. He decided to adapt Joseph Conrad's heart novel into an epic war movie about the futility of the Vietnam conflict. This project has become the film in the Philippines. Shooting lasted more than a year, and everyone suffered terrible storms and writing scripts. The main actor Martin Sheen even suffered a heart attack. Coppola described the film, "We were in the jungle, we had too much equipment, and little by little, we went crazy." Similar to the apocalypse now, the 1980 Drama gate, the spiral gate of control. The film fell behind the program and made the budget. The obsession of director Michael Cimino with details and accuracy of the period led to repeated reconstructions for sets. Moreover, Cimino insisted on a useless number of catches - once even waiting for a particular cloud to float in sight. While he developed a cult following, he did not earn enough money to justify the investment. Did Cimino learn his lesson? Cleopatra always intends to be great. The romantic epic 1963 starred Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, and the vast budget allowed for the production crew to build elaborate sets. The film remains the most expensive film ever made - it is almost bankrupt the 20th century fox. courtesy photo: API / Gamma / Gamma-Rapho / Getty Images Director Joseph L. Mankiewicz replaced Rouben Mamoulian shortly after starting the shooting, and the production stopped when Taylor became seriously sick. Some of the elaborate sets have been unused. Taylor and Burton started an intense love affair that brought a lot of negative attention to the film. Despite all, the film is still considered the most glamorous historical epoeia ever made. The 1967 musical fantasy dolittle was troubled by the beginning. He had a difficult star (Rex Harrison), terrible time for shooting. rebel animals, expensive retailers and poorly chosen shooting positions. The film cost more than $17 million and cashed only $6.2 million. The 1998 remake with comedian Eddie Murphy, went much better. Director William Friedkin is known to go "all out" for his films. The exorcist director built a gigantic bridge over a Dominican Republic river for his 1977 Thriller sorcerer. When the river bed dried up, Friedkin moved to Mexico, where he built another bridge over the Papaloapan river. Even this river dried up before the shooting began. However, Friedkin does not give up. Everyone else doesn't have fun working on the film, but the director says that he "would not change a frame" of the film. In the early days, the 1984 horror film faced many complications. Director Joe Dante and his creative team faced problems caused by the dozens of films of creature effects. "We were inventing technology as we progressed, as well as deviating from the script while discovering new aspects of the characters of Gremlins," Dante explained. Photo courtesy: Eamonn M. McCormack / Getty Images ha"it really freaked out after a while. The study wasn't particularly favorable." The process of filming the special effects has become so arduous that the scene where GIZMO is PELLED with Dart has been added to the film strictly to satisfy the crew. Director Elaine confesses: "I knew I was a confesses: "I knew I was a confesses: "I knew I was acting, but I didn't know anything about the movie." He admitted to having heard the adventure of 1987 It was a "failure." First, shooting in the Sahara desert was a bad idea. May and his crew were afraid of being kidnapped, trapped in anti-man mines or captured in the middle of a civil war, if they survived the heat. Photo Courtesy: Columbia Pictures/IMDb The tension grew between May and the cast. Sometimes the director was shooting scenes more than 50 times. The film cost $51 million and cashed only a third of its budget. The film has Dustin Hoffman, but not much followed by worship. May hasn't directed a movie since. The screenplay of the science fiction thriller Alien 3 of 1992 was repeatedly rewritten, even after the sets had been built and production had already begun. production process, Fincher was frustrated by cast, troupe and studio producers. Photo Courtesy: Rolf Konow/Sygma/Corbis/Getty Images He had to shoot several times, and the producers then cut the film behind the director. He eventually became so angry with the film he refused to be associated with. He was happy to be done with the project, and we can't blame him if he thinks so. Originally, Brad Pitt was supposed to play in 2006 in science fiction drama The Fountain. The film was focused on him, but then dropped the photo due to disagreements on the script a few weeks before production. Director Darren Aronofsky struggled to find a replacement actor: eventually he chose Hugh Jackman and Warner Bros. closed production. Photo Courtesy: Warner Bros./IMDb Two years later, Aronofsky returned to the end, it took almost five years to bring the film to the big screen. The result was a remarkable-looking film that still cashed only $10 million in the box office. Trey Parker and Matt Stone, the 2004 satire action by War on Terror, Team America: World Police, was shot with puppets on a stage and turned into a demanding production. They produced the film with puppets that employed four people to operate. Some shots were so complex that it took a whole day to film them. Photo Courtesy: Paramount/IMDb Stone commented: "It was the worst moment of my life. I don't want to see a puppet anymore." Stone and Parker swore that they would never direct another feature film again. Until today, they kept the word on this front. If you think there can be no drama that produces an animation film, think about it. The film Disney 2000 The Emperorâ ¦s New Groove had many problems. Originally titled the Sun Kingdom, the film was to be made by the artist Sting. However, his songs were abandoned after a lukewarm response, and the original director (Roger Allers) left the project. Photo Courtesy: Walt Disney Production/IMDb The new director Mark Dindal intervened to save the project. The film's budget was revised, and Dindal had to work quickly to turn the film into a critical and financial success. Despite the hectic pace, Dindal success with the 1999 fantasy The Mummy, director Mark Romanek created The Wolfman in 2010. Unfortunately, the film had some hairy problems. Four weeks after production, Romanek fired and Joe Johnston subentered. He asked for a lot of footage, and a new screenwriter was hired to change the final scenes of the film. New publishers were added to production, and Danny Elfman's score was abandoned, to be laterEven though the movie made $139 million, it didn't come close to the success of The Mummy. The 2013 science fiction thriller by Marc Forster required more appearances than the average movie. Many of the furious zombies in the movie were caught up by the CGI, but hundreds more had appeared in real life. A A A Required mortar shot 900 extra. The number of people on the set reached about 1,500 at a certain point. Photo of courtesy: Paramount Pictures / IMDB The film hit many problems, including the seizure of a huge weapons cache by officials of a counter-terrorism unit. Many action scenes have been scratched at the last minute, and the end has been changed several times. The film cost 90 million dollars, but it was a solid financial success to the box office, collecting 540 million dollars. The director George Miller spent 14 years of his life working on the science fantasy of 2015 Mad Max: Fury Road. He insisted to shoot the film with as many practical special effects possible, and repeatedly crashed real cars for movie action scenes. Photo Courtesy: Warner Bros. Photos / IMDb Furthermore, the movie started without an official script. Instead, Miller used hundreds of storyboards. When he finished filmed, he had 400 hours of shooting available. He must have taken a long time to modify the film, but it was worth it. The film finally won an Academy Award for the best modification of the film. The director Ridley Scott was enthusiastic about working on the film adaptation of Philip K. Dick Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep? However, he probably had no idea how much the 1982 science fantasy difficult Blade Runner would have become He had a hectic relationship with the cast and crew, leading to many heated debates. Photo Courtesy: Sunset Boulevard / Corbis / Getty Images Harrison Ford seemed bored most of the time on the set, and several collaborators described the film as "torture". The final blow was captured just as the producers arrived to pull the plug. The film has not taken off at the beginning, but it has become a favorite of worship over the years after its release. The producers thought that the Disney Michael Eisner CEO tried to pull the plug, not wanting another flop box office as the Country Bears. Even the actress Keira Knightley had doubts about him. When you were asked about her next project to her, she said: "It's a thing pirated-probably a disaster." Photo Courtesy: Walt Disney Pictures / IMDB Manufacturers did not appreciate Johnny Depp's "Keith Richards" on Jack Sparrow. Eisner was sure he would ruin the film. Despite all the negativity, the film collected more than 650 million dollars at the World Box Office and lay an adorated deductible. When the comics expert Michael Uslan started working for DC Comics, he had the vision of buying the rights for Batman and make a serious film on the crusade caped. When he told the Vice President Sol Harrison warned him that the brand was dead and abandon the project. Photo Courtesy: Sunset Boulevard / Corbis / Getty Images No one supported him, so USLin began to work without a script or a crew. When the actor Michael Keaton signed up to star like Batman, fans sent more than 50,000 letters in protest. However, when the film was presented in 1989, he has gross $ 411 million globally â "and Keaton became the best Batman to today. It took some time to get to the future to the ground. Robert Zemeckis and Bob Gale 'S 1985 science fantasy was refused by studies for years. Finally, the famous director Steven Spielberg signed as a producer, and the film found a house with Universal Pictures. Photo of courtesy: Universal Pictures / IMDB producers loved the idea of Michael J. Fox played by Marty Mcfly, but they were not sure that he could devote himself to the film because of his television series, Family Ties. Originally launched the actor of Mask Eric Stoltz, but he was fired and Fox assumed the role. film has grossed more than $381 million worldwide and has generated a successful franchise. Star Wars is one of the biggest franchises of all time. The first movie, released in 1977, had wide special effects, causing the movie to fall behind the program almost immediately. Sometimes it seemed like a hopeless attempt. Photo Courtesy: LMPC/Getty Images George Lucas exceeded the film's budget and was To divide his crew into three separate units to finish the film. Fox executives were convinced Star Wars would be a flop, but they were wrong A ¢ â, ¬ "Very, very wrong. Star Wars was a colossal shot, and the rest is the intergalactic story. Would you think after the experience of James Cameron resumed the abyss that would have avoided water-based films. Instead, he directed the historical drama of 1997 Titanic. The shot didn't go very well and the crew members described Cameron as "300-decibel Screamer". Furthermore, the actors beared hours in cold water. Photo of courtesy: Paramount Pictures / IMDB at a certain point, a crew member pushed the lobster soup with a hallucinogen drug, who sent Cameron and more than 50 people to 'Hospital. The budget was blown out of the water, but it worked at the end. The film has collected over $ 2 billion and won Academy Awards for the best image and best director. The director Stanley Kubrick was determined to Turn the Stephen King the shine in A perfect movie. The flow of the psychological horror of 1980 was a long production. Kubrick ordered more shooting, often shooting scenes more than 100 times. The famous "here is the Johnny scene", which included Jack Torrance (Jack Nicholson) which forces an ax through a door, took three days for films and destroyed more than 60 doors. Photo of courtesy: Warner Brothers / Getty Images it only had to take 100 days to film the film, but the production actually lasted 250 days. As reported, Kubrick was so difficult to work with that hair of the actress Shelley Duvall, she started falling, and suffered a nervous breakdown. Yikes! There has never been a film like the 1975 horror drama jaws. The film has seriously gone the budget due to mechanical problems with Bruce, the fake shark of the film. The crew members called the movie "defects". It just had to take 55 days to film the film, but it turned into 159 days. Photo of courtesy: Universal Pictures / IMDB Meanwhile, actors Richard Drevfuss and Robert Shaw were in a bitter feida. He didn't help the boat's boat had a broken hull and really started sinking. Spielberg was sure that his career was over, but the film recessed more than $ 100 million and became one of the most popular films ever made. done.
