Python

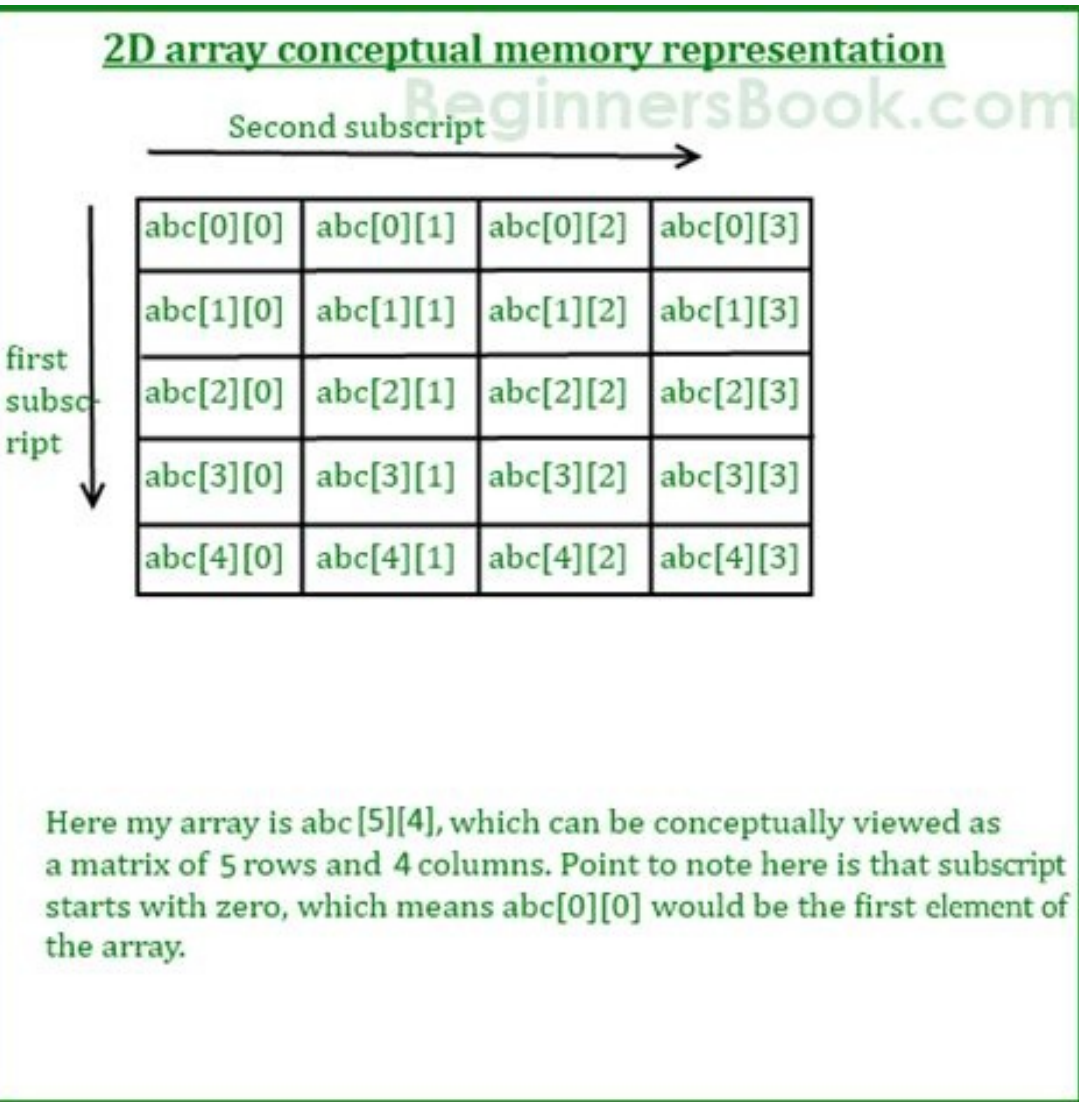

lucky13

Given an array of ints, return true if the array contains both 1's and 3's, at least one each.

lucky13([0, 2, 4]) → false
lucky13([1, 2, 3]) → true
lucky13([1, 2, 4]) → false
```

Go ...Save, Compile, Run (ctrl-enter)

```
public boolean lucky13(int[] nums) {
```

```
string-1 = first_two
```

Given a string, return the string made of its first two chars, so the String "hello" yields "he". If the string is shorter than length 2, return whatever there is, so "x" yields "x", and the empty string "" yields the empty string "".

The screenshot shows a C# IDE with a function `IsFirst` and its test results.

Function Definition:

```

public static bool IsFirst(string s)
{
    if (s.Length > 0)
    {
        return s[0] == 'A';
    }
    return false;
}

```

Test Results:

Expected	Run
<code>IsFirst("hello") == true</code>	True OK
<code>IsFirst("A") == true</code>	True OK
<code>IsFirst("a") == true</code>	False OK
<code>IsFirst("1") == true</code>	False OK
<code>IsFirst(" ") == true</code>	False OK
<code>IsFirst("") == true</code>	False OK
other tests	OK

Why this Thing: Because we need to return `IsFirst` as a function.

✓ All Correct

Why? Because `CRASHES LOG ALL OTHERS`.
Why? Because crash if you try to access an index which is out of bounds. This
