Consider the adjacent living areas when considering which kind of opener to get. We had a typical builder-installed garage door opener on our last house. It was a chain drive, the least expensive kind. But it was under a bedroom, so it would wake the occupants when my husband drove out to work at 5 am. We replaced it with an iDrive. The whole opener is contained within a sealed tube over the garage door opening. It was much quieter and we liked it a lot, though our current builder said his supplier has had numerous complaints about them. Now we're moving again and are going with a mid-cost belt-drive because, since the garage is detached, the noise won't be as much a factor. One upgrade that was nice was the outside keypad. We used it much more than we had anticipated. Page 2 Assuming the garage door is in place and all you need is the opener, you can do this yourself. I bought and installed a Genie screw drive opener, for the first and only time in my life, years ago for my house and it still works just fine. Just take your time and read the instructions carefully. not call someone out to fix it because, we can troubleshoot over the phone for free. Plus depending on which unit you purchased you will have a warranty. yelling because the instructions are not that great. 04-27-2010, 09:13 AM 3 posts, read 7,266 times Reputation: 10 In my case I rather to do it my self, (If you have the tools of course) I save money and I know that it's for me I will do a beter job even beter than a "those call professionals", at the time of warranty you will find the yes but few months replacement opener for the one that broke I know it's been about a month from your post, but I found 2 separate guys off Craigslist each quoting $75 per door for installation (Chamberlain brand), so I guess that's the ballpark. mind that even though both are made by Chamberlain, the Chamberlain-branded units are less sturdy due to them using a multi-piece extendable rail, rather than the one solid rail on the LiftMaster that the installer cuts for you. LiftMaster are pro installer units. Thanks. Does that make a big difference? Normally, I wouldn't care, but my garage is below the master bath and (very slightly) master bedroom. So, if the solid rail is quieter, it may be worth spending a bit more. 02-05-2013, 03:22 PM 844 posts, read 2,592,026 times Reputation: 530 I have the flush-mount jackshaft

unless you really know what you're doing. Those garage doors are under a lot of tension - and - if you pop/pull/spring something the wrong way with an arm in the wrong place - you can wind up losing a finger or two - perhaps a hand - or even part of an arm. Here's my situation 31 years old, I have a credit card with a $975 balance and I truck that I still have 4 1/2 years left to pay on $300 a month 3% interest rate. I have lived in apartments for 4 years now and hate the lifestyle. Here in North texas I'm seeing the housing market booming. Where an $100,000 home 3 years ago now cost $160,000 it's crazy. I have a concern that if I don't save now for a home then it will be out of my reach for along time. And mind you my income is around 34K a year and I owe $15K on my truck. What would you do in my situation? ration) Your down payment The sum you want to borrow Poor credit score or debt to income and you're either refused or given a "go away" interest rate (really high). 43% is the "magic" number ~ meaning that if you're bringing Home $35k/year, you can not be spending more than $1255 on all of your bills, total. So, 1255 - 300 (truck) and $100 (credit card minimum), leaves you $855 for mortgage and no ability for any other loan. 43%, to me, is Insanely high. I was taught (by a financial planner/advisor, my dad) that you want to stay in the 25~27% range and the Old banking standard from before 2008 was 33%. That's so you can actually have some money to Save for retirement, emergency fund, home repairs, etc... Going by a "best case" scenario online calculator, you can only get a loan for $135k. That's assuming some down payment (I put in 5%), generally you want to do your best to avoid Mortgage Insurance, it's just wasted money. I've gotten out of that with as little as 10% down (so $13k for your income), but usually it's 20%. And buying a house isn't cheap, you'll be paying closing costs, inspection fees, etc... that normally costs us about $6k. We've bought 4 homes in the last decade, ranging from $60~180k and those fees don't change a whole lot. Look at those numbers and think about it for a bit ~ to make the most of buying a house, you'll probably need to bring a minimum of $20k cash to the table. In doing so, you will lock yourself into a liability that you MUST pay on month after month, you'll be responsible for all of the repairs and maintenance. Get behind on your bills and you can not only lose your home, but any Other assets (truck) you might own and have wages garnished as well. Do not take this decision/path lightly. I love owning my own home, couldn't imagine living any other way. You're still going to be stuck with annoying/loud neighbors, all of the maintenance and repairs, added insurance load, and a financial responsibility that lasts Decades. But, for the people it appeals to, there's simply no better way to live. So long as I pay the bank and the city/town (taxes), the property is mine to do with mostly as I please (city/county codes and laws limit). I'm responsible for my own shelter, but I can modify it as I see fit. Plus, I'm paying half per month what the worst slum-lord charges for his property in my town. This all boils down to the same thing MrGeek said, you can't afford it. Pay down your debts, build up savings, get into a job with better pay and you'll get there eventually. Don't worry about housing prices, you can't control them and shouldn't speculate on where they might go. Absolutely do NOT look at property as an "investment", anything you're on the hook to pay for month after month isn't an investment or asset, it's a liability by every definition. 06-30-2017, 11:40 AM 15 posts, read 10,834 times Reputation: 12 I owned a home for 4 years, it was a fun experience and then when people get divorced you lose the house. So I have owned before. I don't look at it as a investment. Future equity is nice if I want to sale one day. But I would be buying to live there for along time. I most likely will pay the truck off first and then save. 06-30-2017, 12:17 PM Location: Grosse Ile Michigan 30,742 posts, read 81,801,566 times Reputation: 39666 The real estate market always cycles. However, your life- our lives do not revolve around market trends. Granted, you maybe out of purchasing for a few years; but do any and everything you can to pay off the debt and put some money away for a down payment. A savings acct maynot amass a significant amount of interest, but be diligent and put a percentage of every pay check in it. Detailed information about all U.S. cities, counties, and zip codes on our site: City-data.com. Page 6 I agree, except when the next crash comes, I would do whatever is necessary to buy a house before it goes back up. Even if that means buying before paying off all the debt. At least historically, the market crashes suddenly and pretty fast, stays down a while then shots back up pretty quickly. You may not have a lot of time to act once you realize the market is recovering. Real estate seems to behave differently than the stock market always cycles. It is definitely highish right now in many areas- not the time to by. It is probably not at a peak and might go higher, but it will crash sooner or later, it always has although the general trend is up that does not mean you cannot buy during a down time and ride the next wave. Wait for a crash and buy then. Meanwhile pay off as much debt as you can. The problem with this advice is what if houses in your area go up another 50% and then during a market correction goes down only 25%. Page 8 I would not want to pay for either. Trendy updates, just become outdated has been items while you are still paying for them. An "update" by someone else rarely utilizes the quality level or the choices I would make. The worst ones are ones people do to flip a house or as an incentive to help sell the house. They generally employ the cheapest materials available to make it loo nice today, but not to last for 5 or 20 or 50 years. If I had to pick one or the other, I would chose bathroom as it usually costs less and is easier to undo. Generally, I look at an updated kitchen or bath the same way I look at a completely worn out/destroyed kitchen or bath. It is something I will have to replace soon. However I think generally, potential buyers get caught up in how something looks today, with no concern for whether it will still look or function nicely in five or more years. I do not do the HGTV mantras (in fact, I do not even watch the HGTV house shows), so I may have a different perspective than a typical buyer. Page 9 This is so locale specific it is not worth going into details. However, in my old city, it had to do with parking, partial units could be installed in the garage, as long as there was enough room to still park a car in the garage. My friend added a unit for her Mother, & it cost about 25t, but that was 15 years ago. Page 10 06-22-2017, 09:01 AM 41,787 posts, read 52,317,262 times Reputation: 17869 Some of that stuff was pretty funny, definitely an A for effort. GE is better. A little expensive but they have parts. Yes I have considered buying new units. We made the cost/benefit decision to repair. (I did get recommendations for local stores in another thread, but I'd specifically like to hear about Lowes/HD/BB.) I'm not impartial. Best Buy. We pretty much have bought all our appliances there for the past few years. Their protection plan is better than most of the others... next would be Home Depot, though. I haven't used Lowes in a while. They irritated me with a dishwasher about 5 years or so ago. I'd say that with a washer/dryer, you get pretty much the same deal everywhere in terms of sales. Read up on what you want, go to store, find out price. They all price match, and they all use 3rd party installers...well, no... Best Buy has in-house installers...well, no... Best Buy has in-house people to get to. video help. If you don't mind some very simple labor you can do away with paying for warranties that are money makers for the manufacturer. Especially dishwashers, washers, and dryers where most common repairs can be done through the bottom front panel. Page 4 12-08-2017, 08:57 PM 2,483 posts, read 2,645,128 times Reputation: 2202 Veterans get 10% off at Lowe's. 12-09-2017, 07:29 AM Location: Chapel Hill, NC, formerly Vienna, VA and Phila 9,831 posts, read 16,317,461 times Reputation: 11074 We went to the Sears Outlet in Raleigh (AKA as Scratch and Dent) when we moved here because our house didn't come with a washer/dryer. We ended up getting our Maytag HE Washer/Dryer for about half price ($900 for both, if I remember correctly). I don't know if they delivered or not because my husband loaded it in our van and brought it home. There is a dent on the dryer, which I didn't care about since it's in a laundry room with a door. 12-09-2017, 06:14 PM Location: Triangle, North Carolina 2,819 posts, read my Veteran Discount there) Long story short Home Depot was the biggest mistake I have made in a while. Appliance damaged during delivery, dryer glass cracked, had to wait another week, washer that was damaged in transit was delivered dryer not, another week and only after I had my credit card held in dispute with the dollars did Home Depot decide to pick up and honor their commitment. Fast forward to the next week I again decided to walk into Home Depot and purchase an item, went for the discount, showed my ID being my drivers license which is designated and I kid you not the reply was "we don't honor drivers license with Veteran designation just an active ID, Veteran discounts are only honored on on Veterans Day for you old guys who have already been" Wow! For me it's Lowes they honor Vets, provide parking for Combat Wounded, some have no future plans on going in the future. 12-09-2017, 07:07 PM Location: Raleigh, NC 7,047 posts washer/dryer purchase. Through that experience I got to understand more than I ever did before about their very backwards distribution system. You would be shocked to know how much of it is not even computerized. It took over 6 weeks for me to finally get my washer and dryer and they were both in stock items. Problems: 1. Too many hands to pass through- Depending upon the brand of appliance, and with human error every step of the way through that= problems. 2. Equipment used in the fulfillment process crushes appliances. The delivery guy shared with me that he commonly sees damaged washers and dryers because of the type of fork list they use. It squeezes the sides of the appliance and oftentimes results in dented sides. It is still in the box at this point (dented), but they do not check for damage before they load their trucks for delivery, so it arrives on the truck damaged to you. I had this happen 3 times for my washer dryer delivery. 3. Once it arrives damaged at your home, the delivery company (not the same company will return to the fulfillment warehouse, where an administrative person who gets all those little pieces of paper with cryptic handwritten notes enters them into the system. The fulfillment company then logs a damaged goods claim with the manufacturer (ex. LG). They log everything into Excel, not even into a database! I could go on and on... It was a nightmare and the manager of Home Depot agreed that their fulfillment process was not efficient or easy. Please register to post and access all features of our very popular forum. It is free and quick. very strange at Home Depot. I ordered my washer online after the Lowes people didn't show up. Same washer I had ordered, on sale for pretty much the same price. Something happened with the online order where it didn't go through (or seemed not to), so the person on chat said to put it through again. I did. Yup so the next morning I found in my email confirmation of ordering the washing machine twice. This set off a cascade of hilarity involving customer service from chat, twitter, and phone, as I had also ordered the warranty both times, and getting one of the warranty both times, and getting one of the washers canceled was proving to be a challenge. We would get it canceled, and someone would put it back in. In the end I received one washer and had been giving an additional discount of over $250 for my trouble so it worked out (at least until the washer smelled of mildew beyond the norm, but that's fixed now too). But next time, no Home Depot for me. 12-17-2017, 11:53 AM Location: Research Triangle Area, NC 6,634 posts, read 6,060,403 times Reputation: 10773 Ok well while we are on the rant phase here I have a perfectly timed entry... The saga reached a boiling point today, just about an hour ago...but I'll start from the beginning. On Black Friday (November 24th) I went with my dad to the Lowes in Cary to order a new stainless steel gas stove/range for my kitchen. Found one with a great BF price; ordered it; said they would deliver, install, and take the old one "sometime within the next week" Tuesday December 5th I finally get a call from Lowes at 8am saying they will be there to deliver the stove sometime between 9:00-12:00 so I told them unfortunately that wouldn't work and could we reschedule for the afternoon. They said no but they could do it the next day, Wednesday December 6th I leave work early despite being severely under-staffed and having a million things to attend to there. Get home at 3:30 and wait. Fall asleep. Nothing. No delivery, no call. I call them at 8:00 and get a hold of someone. They say "oh no, it looks like your delivery wasn't entered correctly in the system; we'll reschedule for the same time tomorrow afternoon". WTF. But ok. Thursday December 7th. Plan on leaving work early again; still didn't really have enough staff to feel confident leaving early but was planning on it. This is also the day of the "snow-storm" aka...cold rain with some sleet and occasional snowflakes mixed in that looked really pretty on the cars and bushes but barely stuck on the grass and did nothing on the roads. Lowes calls me at 3:00 to say they had to cancel the delivery because of the "dangerous weather conditions". Said they would call me on Friday to schedule a weekend delivery. Seriously? Whatever a weekend delivery works better for me anyways. Weekend of Dec 9th/10th. Nothing. Call them Monday morning; cant get a live person on the phone. Have my dad call (he was technically the one who ordered it) They call me Monday afternoon to say a delivery representative will call me later in the week the schedule a delivery time. Thursday Dec 14th. Lowes calls me at 11am, in the middle of an important work meeting, to apologize for ghosting me and to schedule a delivery. Earliest they can do it was Sunday the 17th. Fine. Sunday works for me. Let's end this misery once and for all and get the damn stove. TODAY, Sunday December 17th. Get a call from Lowes at 8am saying they'll be here to deliver between 11:00 and 1:00. I'm here, nothing major planned for me to show them the way to my unit (Finley Forest Condos couldn't be more confusing to find actual house numbers so they get a free the same day. We paid for that. "Sorry...we aren't allowed to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver"...... they leave the new range in my dining room and tell me to call lowes installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do that we just deliver to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas installers are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas are qualified to do anything with gas...only professional gas are one with him. They tell me "probably not but go ahead and get the installer scheduled and then call us back to come get the old one with him".... "no sir, I'm sorry you'll have to call us back to come get the old one once he's installed the new one"....... So right now I have a to HD has been my experience. Lowe's offers better stuff from a homeowner perspective from what I have seen. All our hooks, knobs, lights, fixtures etc have come from Lowe's and using their 15 off 50 and such coupons we have saved a bundle. However I purchased the flooring from HD as they had a better selection and better price for what we were looking for. Our insulation came from HD as well as any lumber/drywall/plumbing/electrical stuff like cans for overhead lighting all have come from HD with much better pricing and availability. It's a shame someone didn't post on here about how to prevent this sort of thing from happening again. I sure could use that info. 12-18-2017, 06:30 AM

They used to regularly win the "best wait staff in the Triangle", and their Lemon Tahini salad dressing was (is) legendary. Mmm, think it's time to make a reservation..... Francois, you are bringing back memories! I moved here in the mid 70's and a friend took me there when it first opened, either late 74 or sometime in '75. I was mesmerized by the place and the people. It was instantly hooked. But I never saw so many hippies in one place at a time The wait staff were excellent, so nice and friendly. They got off to a good start. I am so impressed that they've stayed the course, it's not easy in that business. year as well. We stopped by there today and took a look around and got the skinny on what to expect Thanksgiving Day. Sounds like a lot of fun and good food. They have some great vegetarian items, but I know many vegetarian folks who were disappointed when they arrived and saw animal items on the menu. Yes, IC is and has been a local treasure for many, many years. 10-30-2010,

Earlier this year, 14 community news inserts were transitioned from community pages to generic content. Now they will be gone. Yes, it was predictable. Still, a bit sad. 12-15-2017, 08:37 AM Location: The City of Medicine 1,423 posts, read 1,549,595 times Reputation: 1334 I remembered asking what they were going to do with The Durham News after McClatchy acquired The Herald Sun. Looks like I have gotten my answer. Kind of weird since the Wednesday edition switched to the dish while the Sunday edition had more generic content. Also (in terms of grocery fliers), I noticed that both the N&O and the Herald Sun would put Harris Teeter and Lowe's foods fliers while the community papers got Kroger and Food Lion inserts. 12-15-2017, 08:39 AM Location:

However over the past year there has been very little content other than school sports, so they must have been already transitioning. I mostly read online though, so was probably contributing to the lack of funds for the extra journalist(s). They will be missed by me at least. 12-15-2017, 08:44 AM Location: Raleigh, NC 794 posts, read 1,352,929 times Reputation: 974 I enjoy receiving the community papers but our HOA board will be happy...many neighbors don't pick theirs up for weeks and the accumulate at the end of their driveways which drives a couple board members crazy. 12-15-2017,

At one time, I always looked at it. What came first, the chicken or the egg? Did they pull quality content because no one looked, or did people quit looking when they pulled content? The realities of the business are stark. At one point, advertising supported news, journalism, reporting efforts. "News" has become content to attract people to pump ad sales prices with faux circulation numbers. 12-15-2017, Since it's the season to be buying things let me tell you my story.... specific about everything, even the door opening on the right, an ice maker, and the fact that it was available to be delivered TODAY. I spent all morning taking everything out of the refrigerator and freezer. IMPORTANT FACT

 The delivery people DO NOT WORK FOR LOWES. The paperwork did not say make sure the door opens from the right....great start, but they did change it. THEN....I have to call a PLUMBER to come and do whatever to the waterline FIRST and then call Lowes to have the delivery people come and finish. UNBELIEVABLE!! Calling Lowes to speak to the Manager several times did NOTHING!! I CALL THAT BAIT AND SWITCH since nothing more than a $12 piece of tubing (which I got) was ever mentioned when I was ordering. Now I have the additional cost of a PLUMBER --and its FRIDAY afternoon now. PLUS now I have both refrigerators sitting in my kitchen till the plumbing is done since the installers would not undo the original refrigerator (they don't touch copper, remember) but my food is defrosting as I speak! I am so MAD I can't see straight! My plumber (Jason with All City Plumbing) came over on his way home (THANK YOU!) and detached the new one....all in less than 10 minutes -- using the part that I purchased WITH the new refrigerator! THAT cost me an additional $114.30. Now I have BOTH refrigerators sitting here and will have to make yet another appt with Lowes to have the delivery installers haul the old refrigerator away - which they charge for and have already been paid. I will NEVER buy anything from LOWES ever again! and you shouldn't either. Obviously their customers DO NOT COME FIRST!...but their lies do!! 11-16-2018, 05:25 PM 32,236 posts, read 23,502,061 times Reputation: 12852 I would use Tate nate. 11-16-2018, 05:25 PM 32,236 posts, read 23,502,061 times Reputation: 12852 I would use Tate nate.

I'll never buy anything from Lowes because of your poor experience. 11-17-2018, 09:21 AM Location: South Florida 623 posts, read 1,002,498 times Reputation: 859 The delivery drivers are not plumbers. They will hook up the old water connection to the refrigerator as a courtesy if it meets Lowe's requirements. The old copper tubing although it works is outdated and they probably didn't want to take responsibility in case it failed. Why do you think your plumber hooked up a new line? Did you really think that the delivery people were going to do a $114.30 job for free? Seeing that you're always talking up how long you have been a realtor I would think you would have know this. Your wrong to slam Lowe's for this as any delivery service would have done the same. 11-17-2018, 09:25 AM Location: South Florida 623 posts, read 1,002,498 times Reputation: 859 Another point is you don't need the water line to use the refrigerator/freezer so why is your food left out defrosting? Make no sense 11-17-2018, 09:41 AM Location: Port St. Lucie, Florida 4,507 posts, read 9,474,659 times Reputation: 2000 My house is NOT old. The delivery was supposed to include hooking up the water line. I made sure when I did the order. I paid extra for the old refrigerator to be taken away. There was NO copper line taken out or changed. ALL that was done was to turn off the water valve and hook up the new water HOSE to the copper line and the other end to the refrigerator. I paid for that already in my order. Yes I am a Realtor, for over 30 years. I DO NOT mess with refrigerator lines since that is not something I am knowledgeable about and it's not part of my job to know. Ask me a zillion other questions about things and I do know that have to do with me being a REALTOR... such as how to build a house and draw and read blue print plans- those things I DO know....and have done! The delivery/INSTALLERS KNEW what had to be done yet didn't WANT to do it
They are PAID by Lowes to do it though. WHAT in the hell as my being a Realtor got to do with ANY OF THIS ANYHOW! 11-17-2018, 12:35 PM 217 posts, read 387,376 times Reputation: 168 Quote: I will NEVER buy anything from LOWES ever again! and you shouldn't either. Lowe's for this as any delivery service would have done the same. Beg to differ "Boston".  went out shopping on Rt. 41 over there for a new fridge. It was about 95 degrees that day. (I am a retired Realtor after about 25 yrs., if it matters to you.) I like to think I've seen enough appliances, good and bad, and have owned enough to know and explicitly what the words "good or great" service mean and how to recognize the lazy delivery people
I can't remember the name of the store, on Rt. 41 in P/Gorda. I bought a nice Samsung replacement fridge and a few extra goodies for it from them thru a very nice young man, very helpful and efficient. The fridge was delivered the next day by two men, they installed it, hooked up the pricey 'extra' 5 yr. water filter, they even went and got my food from my neighbors while I wiped out the interior. They couldn't have been nicer or more helpful and nice they were to me. A mere retired Realtor, a Yankee for that matter. Your rudeness to FlaLadyB is totally unwarranted
 I hope to be relocating back to FL early spring, and there is no doubt in my mind that if Port Lucie area is my goal this time, I wouldn't hesitate a NY minute to have her find a place for me. She worked with me last year, but things were cut short by major surgery for me. She is a very hard worker, and after 30 yrs. in the business, both of us have just about seen and taken all the nastiness that goes around. She deserves an apology from you, who obviously have no respect for Realtors who work so hard, and ARE very knowledgeable regarding household items, warranties and what is written in a purchase contract!   it because they care about your business with them This is what I did years ago when Lowe's delivered the wrong exterior door and wouldn't correct the issue. The delivery crew said they had no problem going back to the store to pick up the correct door and deliver it later that day. The store manager said no way and that we'd have to reschedule. So I did an online search, contacted Lowe's headquarters in NC and calmly spoke with someone about our issue. Within an hour of my call to NC, the store manager called to tell me the correct door was on our way to us. The service from Lowe's has been really going down lately. It's a shame because I like their stores. We had issues when we ordered a new washer/dryer set last year. We ended up canceling our order with Lowe's and ordered the same set from HD. 07-05-2021, 03:52 PM Location: Not too far East of the Everglades 10,951 posts, read 4,054,229 times Reputation: 2851 In the LONG RUN, Sears is gone, but them, Lowes, Home Depot, Brandsmart and all other HUGE businesses dedicated to this trade are basically the same story. Customer Service after the Sale SUCKS. Now, I have boxes full of generations of REAL Craftsman tools, but I stopped even looking at them after Stanley Black & Decker bought the brand because they further cheapened their design. I'm bothered because I found the Kobalt brand to be very good at the price point, and my experience with warranty was like 20 years ago at Sears. I have a full box of Kobalt at our little cabin so I wasn't dragging tools anymore, and gifted sets to my son and nephews because of that decent quality and warranty. Yesterday I roll into Lowes and find nearly all the Kobalt hand tools gone. Just a single rack with hardly anything. needed to warranty a socket. No go. Talk to an associate who gets the manager too. Long story short, the lifetime warranty is now worthless without the tools. Anyone else think this is bogus?!? Yeah heard a commercial last week for craftsman at Lowe's. Guys where I work have a lot of craftsman and have started changing brands because of the warranty issues. Even before all this it was getting harder and harder to get anything replaced. I have two kobalt ratchets I use at home and I love them. Is there a way to get hold of cobalt direct for warranty? All Dewalt for me, but does suck if you're a kobalt guy. Snap-on guy takes my money every wednesday... Although he gave me an awesome deal on a 72" master series KTL toolbox over the summer. All my hand tools are Snap-on, and I absolutely love my milwaukee drill and three impacts. Snap on has plenty of my money also, 95% of my work box is. Now it would just be nice if our local dealer would show up. Milwaukee has everyone beat in cordless tools imo, they are one thing we can say we use daily and will take whatever you throw at them. You've gotta give your regional rep a call, we've had that happen a few times. I'll have to try that. He even added another truck to split up routes and whenever you see them around both trucks are at the same place lol Seems like they are cutting back on the kobalt 80v stuff too. Was hard as hell to find the leaf blower near me and no one knew if more were coming in. Shame, cause it's very close to gas performance IMO. Even the mower is decent, Interesting, I didn't know they were doing away from Kobalt. I have a couple things from them. For the price point and warranty, I thought they were doing away from Kobalt. I have a couple things from them. them. For the price point and warranty, I thought they were a good weekend warrior brand for sure. That's what they were originally saying to customers and the GP - Kobalt would continue to be supported and warranty honored. Reality is, that's not the case. I have been told, and it can be clearly seen in the stores, that anything where Craftsmanner that anything where originally saying to customers and the GP - Kobalt would continue to be supported and warranty honored. has a replacement for the Kobalt, the Craftsman item will stock the shelf. I have been told, and it can be clearly seen in the stores, that anything where Craftsman has a replacement for the Kobalt, the Craftsman item will stock the shelf. I will say I bought the Craftsman VeraStack toolboxes when re-organizing my garage in preparation for the truck and really like them. But that's not really a tool of course. I have tons of Kobalt stuff and love them. Never had an issue. That's pretty frustrating, although I have been making the switch over to SONIC Tools. www.sonictoolsusa.com as Sonic supports a bunch of the motorsports programs (IMSA-Corvette, BMW, VW) that I care about. Their 24 hour tool exchange is fantastic and prices are more than reasonable for the quality. Check them out as an alternative to Strap On, CornHell, Or Matco..... With the demise of Sears, I personally find the Craftsman name devalued. I'd rather buy Kobalt due to that alone. One thing I've learned as I get older, lifetime warranty on most products. Or the companies will discontinue the product and say it's reached it's useful lifespan. I can make a list of things that no longer function or I can't get serviced that had a lifetime warranty: Scuba gear, windows, tools, etc. It used to be that a company would stand by their products to maintain their brand and customer reputation. This is no longer true. It's very disappointing but a fact of life. I have never bought Kobalt tools, Many years ago I bought Craftsman when Sears sold quality products; I abandoned Craftsman when they cheapened it and started selling it K-Mart. Its all Husky tools for me now. I haven't had any problems with Husky and they have some really nice sets and innovative tools. Snap-on guy takes my money every wednesday... Although he gave me an awesome deal on a 72" master series KTI toolbox over the summer. All my hand tools are Snap-on, and I absolutely love my milwaukee drill and three impacts. Super quality tools for many years. i was a Crafts man too and now I have the original craftsmen and when they break or crack i toss them....cause all u get is junk for replacement at Ace hardware stores. Awesome return policy with snap-on as well, just yesterday I had my dealer exchange my 1/2" wrench because I found a small chip in the chrome plating. It also helps that I have a great relationship with my dealer, most of the time I pay in full upfront rather than paying $25 per week like most people (which is a bad idea for many reasons) Awesome return policy with snap-on as well, just vesterday I had my dealer exchange my 1/2" wrench because I found a small chip in the chrome plating. I got a pry bar online a while back but on the website you will pay full price unless there's a sale on something (pretty rare). Since I pay in full he gives me 20-30% off on almost anything on the truck, if he has to order it I have to pay full msrp. So, contrary to earlier widespread reports, Lowes is in fact abandoning Kobalt hand tools for Craftsman. Talk to an associate who gets the manager too. Long story short, the lifetime warranty is now worthless without the tools. Seems like Lowes are cutting back on the kobalt 80v stuff too. Page 2 I too am extremely annoyed that I have anything against craftsman tools, however on with the original poster that when Stanley bought out Craftsman they ended up cheating the looks of the tools and made him look really crappy and junkie. I too felt that cobalt tools had a great quality they looked great I love their color designs on their electric tools and stuff like that, and their warrantees were hands-down awesome. I still own a 18v impact driver that I bought as a set with the drill and a fast charger many years ago. Somebody broke into my truck and stole the drill and the charger for it now. Craftsmans newer tools looks better, I had a set of kobalt sockets that were the through hole socket set. Absolutely love them. The ratchet started giving out the teeth were just wearing inside the mechanism. I went back to Lowe's about two months ago only to find out that they do not sell cobalt anymore. They now sell craftsman and I have to say, I am impressed with the quality. They are a black oxide tool now and they look really good. The kobalt socket set made it really hard over time to determine what socket size you had because it was a Chrome Vandium type socket With laser etched sizes on it. Overtime the laser etching would fill-in or polish off when you're using your hands and I just made it really hard to determine the socket size. The craftsman socket set is a black oxide with the laser etch and I'm sure the same thing will happen over time and it will be harder to read the size. The thing that I love most about the craftsman set is that it is a spline set so it will fit a wide variety of different types of bolts even if they are rounded off. I am very saddened and disgusted that they are getting rid of kobalt tools. The prices were within a decent range and they were great quality. Again I have nothing against craftsman I own many craftsman I own many craftsman tools but I loved my kobalt. I now own a 24 V kobalt drill and driver and I'm not too enthused with the way it works. It's nowhere near like my 18V was. That said for the guys that can afford the snap on tools I applaud them.
Snap on is an awesome warranties. However for the most of us, their price is just too far out for us to justify unless we do this professionally and own a garage of some sort or like a lead mechanic. If you're a DIY guy kobalt was the best way to go. Dewalt makes awesome tools as well, in fact, they're coming out with more and more. I do also have a fair amount of husky tools which are a brand of Home Depot. They too have a hassle free warranty and they have also gone to the black oxide on most sets which is a very nice except if you're a mechanic that's always working with greasy dirty stuff like breaks or Transmissions or engine blocks, your Chrome ends up looking crappy and you have to keep wiping it off. The black oxide you don't notice the grease as much so you don't have to keep polishing your wrenches. Though I still Wipe my wrenches off every time I use them. Sorry for the long reply but I'm on the same bandwagon with Lowe's abandoning that brand for craftsman. Very disappointed
