The cost associated with getting a driver's license in Illinois varies depending on the type of license you are applying for and your age. Here are the current fees for driver's licenses in Illinois: 1. Under 21 License: $5 for each year of validity, up to 4 years ($20 maximum) 2. Regular License: $30 for 4 years 3. Commercial Driver's License (CDL): $60 for 4 years 4. Motorcycle License: $10 for each year of validity, up to 4 years ($40 maximum) 5. Instruction Permit: $20 Additional fees may apply if you need to retake any tests or if you require any endorsements or restrictions on your license. It's important to note that these fees are subject to change, so it's best to check the Illinois Secretary of State website or visit a Secretary of State facility for the most up-to-date information on fees associated with obtaining a driver's license in Illinois. In Illinois, you must be at least 16 years old to apply for a driver's license. However, if you are under 18 years old, you must first obtain a learner's permit and hold it for at least 9 months before you can apply for a driver's license. If you are over 18 years old, you can take the written and driving tests on the same day. It's important to note that there are other requirements that must be met in order to obtain a driver's license in Illinois, such as completing a driver education course and passing the written and driving tests. When applying for a driver's license in Illinois, you will need to provide the following documents: 1. Proof of identity (such as a birth certificate, passport, or permanent resident card) 2. Proof of residency (such as a utility bill, lease agreement, or bank statement) 3. Social Security number (such as a Social Security card or W-2 form) 4. Proof of lawful presence in the United States (this is required for non-U.S. citizens) In addition to these documents, you will also need to provide proof that you have completed a driver education course (if under 18), passed a vision screening test, and passed both a written and driving test. It's important to note that these are general requirements and specific documentation may vary depending on your individual situation. It's best to check the Illinois Secretary of State website or visit a Secretary of State facility for more information on the specific documents you will need to provide when applying for a driver's license in Illinois. To schedule a driving test in Illinois, you can visit the Illinois Secretary of State website or call the Secretary of State's office at 1-800-252-8980. You will need to have your learner's permit number and your date of birth handy when scheduling your driving test. Before scheduling your driving test, you should make sure that you have completed all of the necessary requirements, such as completing a driver education course (if under 18), holding your learner's permit for at least 9 months (if under 18), and passing a vision screening test and written test. When scheduling your driving test, you will be able to choose a date and time that works for you. You should arrive at least 15 minutes early on the day of your driving test and bring your learner's permit, proof of insurance, and a vehicle with valid registration and proof of ownership. It's important to note that there may be a waiting period for scheduling a driving test due to high demand, so it's best to plan ahead and schedule your driving test as early as possible. The process for getting a learner's permit in Illinois is as follows: 1. Be at least 15 years old. 2. Complete an approved driver education course. This course can be taken in a traditional classroom setting or online. 3. Visit a Secretary of State facility with your parent or legal guardian to take the written exam and vision screening test. You will also need to provide acceptable identification, proof of residency, and proof of your Social Security number. 4. Pass the written exam and vision screening test. 5. Pay the appropriate fee. 6. Receive your learner's permit, which allows you to practice driving with a licensed driver who is at least 21 years old and has held a valid driver's license for at least one year. It's important to note that if you are under 18 years old, you must hold your learner's permit for at least 9 months before you can apply for a driver's license. You must also complete at least 50 hours of practice driving, including at least 10 hours of nighttime driving, before applying for a driver's license. Additionally, while holding your learner's permit, you are not allowed to drive alone or use any electronic devices while driving. In Illinois, if you are under 18 years old, you are required to complete at least 50 hours of practice driving, including at least 10 hours of nighttime driving, before you can take the driving test and apply for a driver's license. These practice hours must be completed with a licensed driver who is at least 21 years old and has held a valid driver's license for at least one year. It's important to note that these practice hours are the minimum requirement, and it is recommended that new drivers practice as much as possible to gain experience and confidence on the road. Here are some tips to help you prepare for the driving test in Illinois: 1. Practice, practice, practice: The more you practice driving, the more comfortable and confident you will feel on the road. Make sure to practice a variety of skills, such as turning, parking, and merging. 2. Review the Illinois Rules of the Road: The driving test will cover both driving skills and knowledge of traffic laws. Be sure to review the Illinois Rules of the Road handbook to ensure you are familiar with all the rules and regulations. 3. Take a driver education course: If you haven't already taken a driver education course, consider taking one to learn more about safe driving practices and traffic laws. 4. Get plenty of rest: Make sure you are well-rested on the day of your driving test so that you are alert and focused. 5. Be comfortable with your vehicle: If you are taking the test in your own vehicle, make sure you are comfortable with it and know where all the controls are located. 6. Practice with a licensed driver: In Illinois, new drivers must complete at least 50 hours of practice driving before taking the driving test. It is important to practice with a licensed driver who can provide guidance and feedback on your skills. 7. Follow all traffic laws and signals: During the driving test, make sure to follow all traffic laws and signals, including speed limits, stop signs, and traffic signals. Remember that passing your driving test is only the first step in becoming a safe and responsible driver. Once you have your license, continue to practice safe driving habits and always be aware of your surroundings while on the road. Here are some common mistakes to avoid during the driving test in Illinois: 1. Failing to come to a complete stop: Make sure to come to a complete stop at all stop signs and red lights. Rolling stops or failing to stop can result in an automatic failure. 2. Not checking mirrors and blind spots: Always check your mirrors and blind spots before changing lanes, merging, or turning. Failing to do so can result in a deduction of points. 3. Speeding or driving too slowly: Make sure to obey posted speed limits and drive at a safe speed for the road conditions. Driving too fast or too slow can result in a deduction of points. 4. Not using turn signals: Always use your turn signals when changing lanes, turning, or merging. Failing to use turn signals can result in a deduction of points. 5. Not following instructions: Listen carefully to the examiner's instructions and follow them closely. Failing to follow instructions can result in an automatic failure. 6. Improperly using the brakes: Make sure to use the brakes smoothly and gradually when coming to a stop or slowing down. Slamming on the brakes can result in a deduction of points. 7. Not yielding right of way: Always yield right of way to pedestrians, bicyclists, and other vehicles as required by law. Failing to yield right of way can result in an automatic failure. Remember that the driving test is designed to ensure that new drivers are safe and responsible on the road. By practicing safe driving habits and avoiding common mistakes, you can increase your chances of passing the driving test and getting your driver's license. Yes, you can use your own car for the driving test in Illinois as long as the vehicle meets the requirements set by the Illinois Secretary of State. The vehicle must have: 1. Valid registration: The vehicle must be registered and insured in Illinois. 2. Valid license plates: The vehicle must have valid license plates displayed on both the front and back of the vehicle. 3. Working brake lights and turn signals: The brake lights and turn signals must be in good working order. 4. Working horn: The horn must be in good working order. 5. No cracked windshield: The windshield cannot have any cracks that obstruct the driver's view. 6. Seat belts for both the driver and examiner: The vehicle must be equipped with seat belts for both the driver and examiner. 7. Working parking brake: The parking brake must be in good working order. 8. Clean and sanitary interior: The interior of the vehicle should be clean and free of clutter or debris. It is important to note that if you are using a rental car, you will need to provide proof of insurance for the vehicle. It is also recommended that you practice driving in your own car before taking the driving test to ensure that you are comfortable with its controls and handling. If you fail the driving test in Illinois, you will need to wait at least one week before you can take the test again. During this time, it is recommended that you practice your driving skills and address any areas where you may have made mistakes during the test. When you are ready to retake the driving test, you will need to make another appointment with the Illinois Secretary of State. You will need to pay the testing fee again and bring all required documents and identification. Keep in mind that when you go to the Driver Services facility, you will need to bring all required documentation and identification, as well as pay any required fees. Additionally, you will need to pass a written exam, a vision test, and a driving test before you can receive your driver's license. Overall, while you cannot apply for a driver's license online in Illinois, starting the process online can help make your in-person application go more smoothly. If you have an Illinois learner's permit, you may be able to drive in other states, but it depends on the laws of the state you are visiting. Some states may recognize your Illinois learner's permit and allow you to drive with it, while others may not. It is important to check the laws of the state you plan to visit before driving with an Illinois learner's permit. You can contact the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) or equivalent agency in that state to find out their specific rules and restrictions. In general, most states require that you have a valid driver's license to operate a motor vehicle on their roads. If you are driving in another state with an Illinois learner's permit, you must follow all of Illinois' laws and restrictions, as well as any additional rules and restrictions imposed by the state you are visiting. It is always a good idea to have an adult licensed driver with you when driving with a learner's permit, regardless of which state you are in. Additionally, make sure to carry your learner's permit with you at all times when driving out of state. In Illinois, a driver's license is valid for four years for most drivers. However, if you are 81 years of age or older, your driver's license will be valid for two years. It is important to note that your driver's license may expire before the four-year period if you are a temporary visitor (such as a student or worker) and your legal status in the United States has an expiration date that is sooner than four years. It is also worth mentioning that Illinois offers an option for drivers to renew their license up to one year before its expiration date. If your license has been expired for less than one year, you can still renew it without having to retake the written and driving tests. However, if your license has been expired for more than one year, you will be required to take both tests again. It is important to keep track of your driver's license expiration date and renew it in a timely manner to avoid any penalties or fines. Yes, in Illinois, you can renew your driver's license online if you meet certain requirements. To be eligible for online renewal, you must: - Have a valid driver's license that is not expired for more than one year - Be at least 22 years old and under 74 years old - Have no medical or vision issues that would require an in-person renewal - Not have any restrictions or violations on your driver's license If you meet these requirements, you can visit the Illinois Secretary of State website and follow the instructions to renew your driver's license online. You will need to provide your driver's license number, date of birth, and the last four digits of your Social Security number to begin the process. If you are not eligible for online renewal, you will need to renew your driver's license in person at a Secretary of State Driver Services facility. You may also need to take a vision screening or a written test depending on your age and driving record. If you are an international student or a foreign resident living in Illinois, you can apply for a driver's license by following these steps: 1. Check your eligibility: You must have legal status in the United States to apply for a driver's license in Illinois. Your legal status will determine what documents you need to provide to the Illinois Secretary of State. 2. Obtain an Illinois learner's permit: Before you can take the driving test, you must obtain a learner's permit. To do so, you will need to pass a written test on traffic laws, signs, and signals. You will also need to provide proof of your identity, legal status, and residency in Illinois. 3. Practice driving: Once you have your learner's permit, you can start practicing driving with a licensed driver who is at least 21 years old. 4. Schedule and take the driving test: When you feel comfortable driving, you can schedule your driving test at an approved testing location. During the test, you will need to demonstrate your ability to safely operate a motor vehicle. 5. Receive your driver's license: If you pass the driving test, you will receive your driver's license within a few weeks. It is important to note that the process for obtaining a driver's license as an international student or foreign resident may vary depending on your specific circumstances and legal status. You may also need to provide additional documents or take additional tests depending on your situation. It is recommended that you check with the Illinois Secretary of State for more information on obtaining a driver's license as an international student or foreign resident. Yes, there is a difference between a driver's license and a learner's permit. A driver's license is a legal document that allows you to operate a motor vehicle on public roads. In Illinois, you must be at least 18 years old to apply for a regular driver's license, although you can apply for an under-18 driver's license if you are between 16 and 17 years old. A learner's permit, on the other hand, is a temporary license that allows you to practice driving under the supervision of a licensed driver. In Illinois, you can apply for a learner's permit when you are at least 15 years old. To obtain a learner's permit, you must pass a written test on traffic laws, signs, and signals. While driving with a learner's permit in Illinois, you must be accompanied by a licensed driver who is at least 21 years old and has at least one year of driving experience. You must also follow certain restrictions, such as not driving between 10:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m. Once you have practiced driving with your learner's permit and feel comfortable behind the wheel, you can schedule your road test to obtain your regular driver's license. Yes, there are specific vision requirements for obtaining a driver's license in Illinois. When you apply for a driver's license, you will be required to pass a vision test. The vision test will measure your visual acuity and your ability to recognize colors. In Illinois, the minimum visual acuity requirement is 20/40 in at least one eye with or without corrective lenses. If you do not meet this requirement, you may be referred to an eye specialist for further evaluation. You will also be tested on your ability to recognize colors, specifically red, green, and amber. If you are unable to recognize these colors, you may be required to obtain a special permit or use certain equipment while driving. It is important to note that if you wear glasses or contact lenses to correct your vision, you must wear them while driving. If you fail the vision test or have a medical condition that affects your ability to drive safely, your license application may be denied or revoked. Yes, you can use a rental car for your driving test in Illinois as long as it meets the following requirements: 1. The rental car must be legally registered and insured. 2. The rental car must have valid license plates. 3. The rental car must be in good working condition, with all safety features in place and functional, such as seat belts, headlights, turn signals, and brake lights. 4. The rental car must have a valid safety inspection sticker. 5. The rental car must have a passenger seat for the examiner to sit in during the test. It is important to note that you must provide proof of insurance for the rental car and that the insurance policy must meet the minimum liability coverage required by Illinois law. Also, before taking the driving test with a rental car, you should practice driving in the same vehicle to become comfortable with its handling characteristics and features. If you fail the driving test in Illinois, you are allowed to retake the test after seven days. However, it is recommended that you take the time to practice and improve your driving skills before retaking the test. This will increase your chances of passing the test on your next attempt. When you retake the driving test, you will be required to pay another testing fee and schedule another appointment. It is important to note that if you fail the test three times, you will be required to complete a driver's education course before you can retake the test again. To avoid failing the driving test, it is recommended that you practice driving on a regular basis and review the Illinois Rules of the Road handbook. You should also be familiar with the vehicle that you will be using for the test and ensure that it is in good working condition with all safety features in place and functional. To take the DMV written test in Illinois, you will need to bring the following documents: 1. Proof of identity: You must provide a valid document to prove your identity, such as a passport, birth certificate, or state ID card. 2. Proof of residency: You must provide a valid document to prove your residency in Illinois, such as a utility bill or lease agreement. 3. Social Security Number: You must provide your Social Security Number or a letter from the Social Security Administration indicating that you are not eligible for a Social Security Number. 4. Parental consent: If you are under 18 years of age, you must have parental consent to take the test. 5. Payment: You will need to pay a fee for the written test. The fee may vary depending on the type of license you are applying for and other factors. It is important to note that you should check with your local DMV office for any additional requirements specific to your situation. Additionally, it is recommended that you study the Illinois Rules of the Road handbook before taking the written test to increase your chances of passing on your first attempt. Yes, you can take the DMV written test in a language other than English in Illinois. The Secretary of State's office offers the written test in multiple languages, including Spanish, Polish, Chinese, and Korean. However, it is important to note that you will need to indicate your language preference when you make your appointment for the written test. You will also need to bring an interpreter with you if you require one. The interpreter must provide his or her name and address, and must also present a valid identification card. Additionally, it is recommended that you study the Illinois Rules of the Road handbook in your preferred language before taking the written test. This will help you better understand the rules and regulations of driving in Illinois and increase your chances of passing the test on your first attempt. If you fail the DMV written test in Illinois, you will need to wait at least one day before retaking the test. You will need to pay another fee when you retake the test. It is recommended that you review the Illinois Rules of the Road handbook and study the material thoroughly before retaking the test. If you need additional help, there are many online resources and study guides available to help you prepare for the test. If you fail the written test three times, you will need to complete a driver's education course before you can retake the test. You may also be required to complete additional training or education before being allowed to take the test again. It's important to take your time and carefully read each question on the test. Don't rush through it or second-guess yourself. If you're unsure of an answer, skip it and move on to the next question. You can always come back to it later. If you fail the DMV written test in Illinois, you can retake the test as soon as the next business day. However, you will need to pay another fee when you retake the test. It is recommended that you take some time to review the Illinois Rules of the Road handbook and study the material thoroughly before retaking the test. Use this time to identify areas where you struggled on the first test and focus your studying on those areas. If you fail the written test three times, you will need to complete a driver's education course before you can retake the test. You may also be required to complete additional training or education before being allowed to take the test again. Remember, it's important to take your time and carefully read each question on the test. Don't rush through it or second-guess yourself. If you're unsure of an answer, skip it and move on to the next question. You can always come back to it later. Back to Program Home Updated for June 2025Based on official Illinois Driver's manualThe written knowledge test for Illinois is comprised of 35 multiple-choice questions based on the 2025 Illinois Rules of the Road handbook. Of the 35 questions, you'll need to answer a minimum 80% correctly to pass and qualify for your instruction permit. Be sure to bring proof of identity, signature, and residence with you to your local SOS office when you're ready to take your test for your permit or license. If you're under 17, you'll also need to prove you've either completed or enrolled in a driver's education course. A portion of the questions will be about road signs, so this SOS practice test is designed to focus solely on those questions and help you perfect your knowledge of road signage. You should be able to identify individual road signs and be aware of what action or actions may be required for each sign, including regulatory signs, traffic lights, turn signal indicators (or "blinkers"), curb markings, and railroad crossings. This SOS road sign practice test is an important part of using practice tests to help you pass on your first attempt, so you don't need to come back to try again on another day.
