Greg McKeown, New York Times author of Bestseller, essentialism la but great fan of Michael Hyatt his podcast, this is your life and lead to win, having been a weekly dose of development of leadership for years. His books They fill my shelves and above all affect my behavior. The complete planner focused, although expensive in my opinion, he kept me aligned with my vision and task for almost three years. I believe that if my vision is worth a realization and the Flip keeps me on the track, its probably worth the investment, the right gold leadership in his latest book, Vision Driven Leader, Hyatt handed again here there are five highlights:?! Vision is critical for the leadership: Unless you have a clear vision for which you want to take your organization (company, ministry, diocese, family) Nobody will take you to follow you a vision is a clear picture of a preferred future EA € s where ... yes wishes At your organization to be in 3-5 years in all multiple meter product classes (we'll talk more about it). Leaders without vision can never inspire their people towards passionate commitment. But if the vision is convincing enough people put themselves in their effort to make it real, regardless of the difficulty to do so. Unless you have a clear vision for which you want to take your organization, ministry, diocese, family, nobody will take you to follow you. Click to Tweet Vision Distings Leadership from management: Every writer business has addressed the theme of leadership differentiation from management. Both roles are important for organizations, but they are fundamentally different. Hyatt offers demanding clarity. The vision is that separates the leaders who inspire simple managers. The leaders clarify the vision, while the managers perform the vision. Leaders use vision to inspire and motivate their people, while managers use vision to keep everyone on track. The leaders stay focused on a longest time horizon (3-5 years out), while managers keep their eye on the short term this week, this month, in this quarter. If the organization does not have a long-term view, it is probably more managed and under-LED. Vision separates the leaders by managers. Leaders clarify vision, manager perform. Leaders use vision to inspire, managers use to monitor vision. If there is tactical urgency, but no vision, you can be over-management and under-leader. Click to Tweet Pitfall of the Leader Vision Deficit A failure opportunity: Hyatt makes a brilliant case for the power of vision in Justifying Ken Olsen, founder of the Digital Equipment Corporation and Steve Jobs, Founder of Apple. In 1977, Ken Olsen said, à, there is no reason why anyone would like a computer in their home.à, contrasted by Steve Jobs he said, À € the most convincing reason for most people a buying a computer for their home will be linked to a national network communication level.À € The only thing that jobs was invented is that the network would be international, not national, and the World Wide Web was invented 4 years after Jobs said this. A great example of what has meant Alan Kay scientist computer when he said, À € the best way to predict the future is to invent it. There, the Script vision: the leaders not only take people to those who have ever been before , but they also take people in places that, as a leader have never been before. Vision allows the leaders to make a way in which no one existed previously. If you have a white canvas, everything is reduced to clarify what you want. Less The leaders get crystalline their passions, desires and hopes for the future they € is never a chance to reach it. To get to that level of clarity, a vision script is required. Unless the leaders get crystalline their passions, desires and hopes for the future will never be a chance to reach it. To get to that level of clarity, a vision script is required. Click to Tweet a declaration of intent and a vision vision These are not the same things the mission describes what is a company; A vision describes where the business is going. The mission is here, the vision is still outside. The mission is now; The vision is later. A correct vision script is not a concise statement created in a bumper sticker. It is a robust document written in the present time that describes your future reality (5 years out) as if it were today in four key areas: team, products, sales / marketing and impact. In my work with the ministries and the awareness office with the Archdiocese of Vancouver, we took the concept of Hyatt's vision script and created a document around our key areas - team, culture, community relations with strategic partners and Impact of the Ministry. A statement of mission and a vision script are not the same things. The mission describes what a business does; A vision describes where it is going. The mission is here and now, the vision is still outside and what is the next. Click to tweet the relationship between vision and strategy: a vision script is a document that clarifies where you are going. A strategic plan is the path and the process you will take to get there. The vision must come first. No route is more dangerous to take what does not have the end in mind. Without a vision, there is no destination. Without a strategy, there is no way forward. Both are needed but the vision comes first. Starting from a vision that looks 5 years old, we work backwards to create a strategic plan. So that plan must be divided into significant measures upcoming steps and tangible goals. An annual plan was created to move closer to your vision in each area. The trimestral stretch goals can be able to move concretely in the right direction. Weekly and newspapers, lined up to your vision, make sure you make incremental progress on what matters more € à, - "your vision! No route is more dangerous to take for an organization of what is no end in mind . The vision must come first. Click to tweet without vision, there is no destination. Without a strategy, there is no way forward. Both are needed but the vision comes first. Click to tweet a daily leader Dozen you are promoting mediocrity without knowing it? It?
