upskilling for promotions and hikes makes them enroll in it! As per a survey conducted by a private organization, it was found that 66.7% of the working professionals drop out of their 2-year MBA degree programs by the end of the first year because of their work commitments, which do not allow them to fully focus on their studies. This percentage of dropping out of a course can be lowered by making online 1-year MBA programs accessible to them. A 1-year MBA online program can easily fulfill the rising demand for trained business professionals in the country. Its shorter duration and technology-driven curriculum make you a better fit not only for the present times but also for the future, when only AI-trained professionals will be leading the business world. Why A 1-Year Online MBA Program? The digitization in education has played a major role in increasing the Gross Enrolment Ratio (GER) in India. The rise of online higher degrees, like an online 1-year MBA degree, has made it feasible for business aspirants from different categories to complete their masters without taking a career break. The major reason contributing to an increase in the number of applications for an online 1-year MBA course is that it covers all the business fundamentals with a main focus on the specialization subjects in just one year. Moreover, on completing it from a recognized university, you will get similar career opportunities as available after a traditional 2-year MBA program. Who Should Pursue A 1-Year Online MBA program for the present times, where everything is being judged based on the saying Work Smarter, Not Harder. For all those MBA aspirants who have been struggling for a long postal stamp dedicated to the centenary of Madras UniversityThe first-ever demand for higher education in Madras Presidency was given in a public address to Lord John Elphinstone, governor of Madras, signed by 70,000 residents when the Governor-in-Council was contemplating "some effective and liberal measures for the establishment of an improved system of national education". This public petition, which was presented by the Advocate General Mr George Norton on 11 November 1839, pressed the need for an English college in the city of Madras. Pursuant to this, Lord Elphinstone evolved a plan for the establishment of a central collegiate institution or a "university". This university had twin departments a high school for the cultivation of English literature, regional language, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science, and a college for instruction in the higher branches of literature, philosophy and science for literature, philosophy a Presidency College, Chennai. A systematic educational policy for India was formulated 14 years later by Wood's despatch, which pointed out the rationale for "creating a properly articulated system of education from the primary school to the University." The dispatch recommended the establishment in the universities of professorships "for the purposes of the delivery of lectures in various branches of learning including vernacular as well as classical languages". As a result, the University of Madras, organised on the model of the University of Madras, organised on the model of the University of London, was incorporated on 5 September 1857 by an act of the Legislative Council of India.[18]The university progressed and expanded through the 19th century to span the whole of South India, giving birth to university (1926), Annamalai University (1926), Annamalai University (1926), Annamalai University (1926), Annamalai University (1926), Travancore University (1926), Annamalai University (1926), Annamalai University (1926), Travancore University (1926), Annamalai Universit
