Identify Run-ons and Fragments

Run-ons are a type of sentence error.

Although we don't always speak in complete sentences, it is important to write in complete sentences. A complete sentence has at least one subject and one predicate. A fragment is an incomplete sentence. A run-on is several sentences strung together.

Directions: Can you identify run-ons and fragments? Read each sentence below. If it is a fragment, write F on the line next to it. If it is a run-on, write R. If the sentence is correct, write C. Rewrite run-ons and fragments on a separate sheet of paper. You won't have to rewrite them all.

Exercise 1 | Exercise 2 Skip to main content XLog In Run-ons, comma splices, and fused sentences are all names given to compound sentences that are not punctuated correctly. The best way to avoid such errors is to punctuate compound sentences correctly by using one or the other of these rules. Join the two independent clauses with one of the coordinating conjunctions (and, but, for, or, nor, so, yet), and use a comma before the connecting word. _____, and _____, 1. He enjoys walking through the country. He often goes backpacking on his vacations. When you do not have a connecting word (or when you use a connecting word other than and, but, for, or, nor, so, or yet between the two independent clauses) use a semicolon (;). _____; _____, 2. He often watched TV when there were only reruns. She preferred to read instead, or _____; however, _____. So, run-ons and fused sentences are terms describing two independent clauses that are joined together with no connecting word or punctuation to separate the clauses. The following sentences are both examples that are missing the connecting words and/or the appropriate punctuation. 3. They weren't dangerous criminals they were detectives in disguise. 4. I didn't know which job I wanted I was too confused to decide. Go to Answers Didn't find what you need? Search our website or email us.
