The USERTrust root certificate you are looking for was added in Sierra, and was not present in El Capit  n. If you can upgrade to Sierra or High Sierra or Mojave, you will have the USERTrust root certificate. There are other reasons to upgrade to High Sierra (or later), if your Mac supports that. (Have an external backup or two, check that your key applications are working, check that your scanners and printers have drivers available from hardware vendors, and upgrade.) Otherwise, you will need to acquire and upload the certificate manually.All this is part of the reorganization of Comodo providers. People related to certificates formerly known as Comodo are now known as Sectigo, and I think this is the root certificate you will need to upload, if you cannot upgrade to Sierra or High Sierra or Mojave. There are variations to this certificate, depending on the current state of the system, and yours is not very up-to-date. I don't have any way to prove it either, since I don't have an El Capitan system around.Some organizations that use this USERTrust certificate have downloads (supposed) of the root certificate available.You probably shouldn't trust me or the download of the certificate either. The InCommon AddTrust External CA Root certificate expired on Saturday, May 30, 2020 at 6:48 a.m. See Sectigo AddTrust External CA Root expires on May 30, 2020 for more details. Sectigo is the company that provides the InCommon certificates used in U-M. Sectigo sets the expiration dates of its certificates, and U-M cannot change or extend them. Take action if your unit has installed an InCommon certificate (usually requested and received through WASUP) on a system, site, or service and is experiencing expiration issues.The current certificates are available at ITS: SSL Server Certificates. General action The necessary U-M units that manage or services that use InCommon certificates (usually requested and received through WASUP) need to ensure that updated certificates are installed and configured for The new practices of the Certificate of Uncormon Certificate: If you have one of the following installed certificates that expired on May 30, 2020, "either in a certificate chain or in a" CAPATH" directory, eliminate them: Remove the ADDTrust certified from external AC RAA  Z (it expired on May 30, 2020) Remove the intermediate certificate from the RSA certification authority (it expired on May 30, 2020). You must verify the expiration date in this Certificate to determine if it is also necessary to eliminate it. A RAA  Z certificate with the same topic and hash you need to maintain. Configure your system or service to follow the new practices of the Unconsmon Certificate (described server certificates SSL ". Install whether it is not present. For mod_cosign and any other middleware that requires a complete certificate string, also install the RA  Z certificate of the UserRust R Certification Authority SA (expires 2038). This RAA  Z certificate should not be installed when configuring a web server for HTTPS, but may be necessary in many other cases. Test to make sure that customers can access their system or service. Specific action needed for mod_cosign for sites that are authentic using Apache Mod_cosign: Find the Cosigncrypto configuration in your Apache configuration files: cosigncrypto /path/certificate.key /path/certificate.cert / route / to / ca /       <      
