[1] This reveals the speaker's dependence on the ultimate and its love; His loss leaves not only sad but absolutely devastated and, visiting his tomb, subconsciously submits to further self-inflicted anguish. [2] The poem has a heavy focus on decay and deterioration: the leaves are "passionate" and the narrator's thoughts are "paralysis." [3] Like many of Poe's later poems, "Ululume" has a strong sense of rhythm and musicality. [4] The verses are intentionally sound, built around sound to create feelings of sadness and anguish. [5] The poem employs Poe's typical theme of the "death of a beautiful woman", which he considered "the most poetic subject in the world." [6] Biographers and critics have often suggested that Poe's obsession with the subject stems from the repeated loss of women throughout his life, including his mother Eliza Poe, his wife, and his adoptive mother Frances Allan. [7] Ululume's identity in the poem is uncertain. ISBN 978-1-4351-0469-3 ^ Peoples, Scott. The almanac of American letters. Much work has been done by scholars to identify all Poe's allusions, particularly by Thomas Olive Mabbott, although other scholars suggest that names throughout poetry should be valued only because of their poetic sounds. [12] The title itself suggests the lament (from the Latin Ululare). [13] The name can also allude to the Latin light, a light that symbolizes pain [14]. The narrator personifies his soul as the ancient Greek psyche, which represents the irrational but attentive part of his subconscious. Much like a few of Poe's other poems (such as "The Raven", "Annabel Lee", and "Lenore"), "Ululume" focuses on the narrator's loss of his beloved due to her death. Edgar Allan Poe, The Man.
