

Continue

Hole in one at the masters

Few moments in sports are as electrifying as a hole-in-one, and when it happens at the Masters, it becomes a part of golf legend. The Masters, held annually at Augusta National Golf Club, has seen its fair share of these magical shots. Each ace not only showcases the skill and precision of the golfer but also adds a layer of excitement to the tournament's rich history. From the first hole-in-one recorded in 1934 to the latest jaw-dropping shots, these moments capture the imagination of fans and players alike. They highlight the unpredictable nature of the sport and the sheer brilliance required to achieve such a feat on one of golf's grandest stages. Dive into the history and relive every unforgettable hole-in-one at the Masters, where each swing has the potential to make history. Golfers dream of making a hole-in-one at the Masters, a tournament rich in history and prestige. These moments create legendary highlights etched into the annals of golf. Early Masters tournaments witnessed notable hole-in-ones, with Ross Somerville achieving the first in 1934 on the 16th hole and Claude Harmon replicating this on the 12th hole in 1947. These feats set a standard for future golfers. In 1972, Charles Coody's ace on the 6th hole garnered attention, and in 2019, Bryson DeChambeau's hole-in-one on the 16th hole captivated audiences, highlighting the ongoing evolution of skill and precision in the sport. During the 1960s and 1970s, hole-in-ones at the Masters became more frequent, highlighted by Charles Coody's ace on the 6th hole in 1972. The trend continued into the late 70s, with Jeff Sluman acing the 16th in 1980, reflecting the increasing skill of the players. Into the 1980s and beyond, hole-in-ones became thrilling highlights, such as Tiger Woods' spectacular ace on the 16th in 1997. Each hole-in-one at the Masters adds to the rich history and tradition of this prestigious event. From 1980 onwards, many golfers have achieved the rare feat of a hole-in-one at the Masters. Notable instances include Corey Pavin's ace on the 6th hole in 1992, Tiger Woods' memorable 1997 hole-in-one on the 16th hole, and Louis Oosthuizen's 16th hole ace in 2016. In 2019, Bryson DeChambeau added to the excitement with another 16th hole ace. Each of these moments underscores the skill and precision required and cements their place in golfing lore. The Masters features several notable holes, each with its unique challenge and records. Below, a breakdown of each hole provides insights into their significance. Tea Olive, the opening hole, demands precision off the tee. A gentle dogleg to the right, it has historically set the tone for many Masters champions. Though difficult, golfers start their rounds here with cautious optimism. The first ace at Tea Olive took place in 1949, marking a pivotal moment in Masters history. Subsequent holes like Redbud and Firethorn have also witnessed thrilling aces, each adding to the tournament's rich legacy. These remarkable feats not only captivate fans but also highlight the immense skill required to conquer Augusta National's legendary course. Each hole-in-one is a testament to precision, nerves of steel. Pink Dogwood offers a chance for early birdies. This par 5 rewards long hitters who can navigate the fairway bunkers. Notably, Louis Oosthuizen scored an albatross here in 2012, showcasing the hole's potential for dramatic scores. Golden Bell is another pivotal hole known for its challenging par 3. Despite its short distance, the swirling winds often complicate club selection, making any hole-in-one achievements here particularly memorable. Redbud, the daunting par 3 16th, has witnessed multiple memorable hole-in-ones, often sparking roars from the gallery. This hole features a sloping green where precision and luck converge. Short yet tricky, Flowering Peach tests players' accuracy and decision-making. With its small green and strategic bunkering, it can quickly turn a good round into a challenging one. Despite its modest length, the hole has seen its fair share of dramatic moments. Notably, in 2016, Louis Oosthuizen's incredible ricochet off J.B. Holmes' ball led to an unforgettable hole-in-one. Generating such excitement, Oosthuizen's shot highlighted the unpredictable nature of Flowering Peach. These awe-inspiring moments enhance the allure of the Masters, making each hole a potential game-changer. With each iteration of the tournament, fans eagerly anticipate similar feats of precision and luck. Flowering Crab Apple, one of Augusta's longest par 3s, is a challenging hole noted for Shane Lowry's 2016 hole-in-one. Surrounded by bunkers and featuring undulating greens and unpredictable winds, it tests golfers' skills and nerves. This significant part of Masters history thrills spectators and enhances Augusta National's reverence. Each shot holds the potential for memorable moments, making it a pivotal stage for future Masters tournaments. The tradition and prestige of achieving a hole-in-one at this storied par 3 captivate players and fans, solidifying its status as a cornerstone of the Masters legacy. Magnolia requires distance and precision. Its elevated green makes approach shots challenging. Historically, it has proven one of the more difficult holes, often impacting final scores significantly. This difficulty is precisely why any hole-in-one on Magnolia garners tremendous admiration. Witnessing such a feat during The Masters underscores a player's skill and luck, creating unforgettable moments. These rare aces become highlights of the tournament, celebrated by fans and commentators alike. Players achieving a hole-in-one on Magnolia join an elite group, forever etching their names into Masters history. The thrill of seeing a ball roll directly into the cup electrifies the atmosphere, uniting everyone in a shared moment of awe. Juniper features a sloped green that demands precise iron play, contributing to thrilling hole-in-ones that have excited spectators, like Corey Pavin's memorable ace in 1992 and Louis Oosthuizen's spectacular 2016 shot that ricocheted off J.B. Holmes' ball. The Masters has witnessed numerous such moments, each adding to the tournament's legendary status and highlighting the skill and luck needed to conquer Augusta National's challenging par-threes. From Jeff Sluman's historic shot in 1992 to Shane Lowry's incredible ace in 2016, these moments have become timeless reminders of the precision and drama that define The Masters. Pampas blends length and precision. This hole's difficult green complex poses challenges, especially when approaching from different angles. It has been a pivotal hole in many Master's stories. Notably, in 2016, Louis Oosthuizen made a miraculous hole-in-one here after his ball ricocheted off another player's ball, showcasing both skill and a bit of luck. Pampas remains a must-watch. Its combination of risk and reward makes it a thrilling part of the tournament every year. Each hole-in-one at the Masters becomes a part of the event's rich history, celebrated by fans and golfers alike. Yellow Jasmine is a golf hole known for offering opportunities for birdies and eagles, making it a site of many tournament-changing moments due to its risk-reward nature. Among its most memorable moments is Shane Lowry's hole-in-one in 2016, which added to the hole's lore and highlighted the intense drama and skill required. Every hole-in-one at the Masters, including Lowry's, showcases players' precision and nerves, often electrifying the crowd and shifting momentum. This 2016 ace is just one example of why Yellow Jasmine is a focal point in Masters history, renowned for producing unforgettable highlights. The Carolina Cherry tests long drives and approach shots. Its elevated green with a false front can challenge even seasoned players. Many rounds either gain momentum or face setbacks here. Historically, it has also been the site of memorable hole-in-one achievements. These moments not only thrill the crowd but also serve as pivotal highlights in the tournament, providing unforgettable drama. Since its inception, the Masters has witnessed numerous unforgettable aces on the Carolina Cherry. Each hole-in-one adds to the lore of the tournament, showcasing player skill and the course's unique challenges. Camellia, a challenging hole at the Masters with its downhill slope and strategic bunkers, demands precision from golfers. Memorable hole-in-ones, such as Byron Nelson's in 1959 and Fred Couples' on the sixth hole in 1992, have thrilled spectators and enriched the tournament's legacy. Curtis Strange's remarkable ace on the 12th hole in 1988 further illustrates the historical significance and enduring allure of the Masters, showcasing extraordinary talent and competitive spirit. Other notable instances include players like Ernie Els in 2004 and Louis Oosthuizen in 2016, whose impressive feats captivated audiences worldwide. Each hole-in-one at the Masters not only contributes to the tournament's storied history. White Dogwood is known for its challenging length and the water guarding its green, causing many golfers to take a conservative approach. This hole has significantly influenced many Masters outcomes, particularly during Sunday's rounds. Despite its difficulty, it has seen spectacular holes-in-one that captivate audiences and cement players' names in Masters history, such as Chris DiMarco's in 2004 and Jamie Donaldson's in 2013. These rare aces underscore the drama and skill required at Augusta National, making each occurrence a celebrated event among fans and golfers. The significance of a hole-in-one at this prestigious tournament extends beyond mere luck. Golden Bell, with its famed Rae's Creek and swirling winds, demands precision. Many remember Tiger Woods' hole-in-one in 1997 as a highlight, underlining the hole's iconic status in Masters lore. Another memorable moment came in 2016 when Shane Lowry aced it, showcasing that finesse and intense focus can conquer even the most challenging par-3s at Augusta National. This tradition of stunning aces continues to captivate fans and showcases the incredible skill required to master such a prestigious tournament. Each hole-in-one at the Masters adds to the rich history and allure of the event, illustrating why it's revered by golf enthusiasts worldwide. Azalea, part of Amen Corner, offers eagle opportunities. Its famous azalea-lined fairway and Rae's Creek in front of the green require strategic play. This hole has seen some of the most exciting Masters moments. From Larry Mize's miraculous chip in 1987 to Louis Oosthuizen's albatross in 2012, these unforgettable performances have etched Azalea into Masters lore. Each shot adds to the tournament's rich history. Golfers dream of achieving a hole in one on this iconic course. Achieving such a feat at the Masters not only cements a player's place in golfing history but also electrifies the crowd, adding to the grandeur of the event. Chinese Fir, a golf hole without bunkers, challenges players with its undulating green, testing their putting skills and making par a commendable achievement. Over the years, several memorable aces at the 14th hole have showcased the precision required to navigate its complex contours, highlighting the skill needed to master it. These moments enrich The Masters' history, with each hole-in-one celebrated as a testament to exceptional accuracy and touch. Fans eagerly anticipate the drama at this hole, where every ace, whether by a seasoned veteran or rising star, offers a glimpse of golfing history. Firethorn presents a classic risk-reward scenario. Reaching the green in two is possible but risky with water guarding the front. Memorable moments include Gene Sarazen's double eagle in 1935. More recently, Louis Oosthuizen's 2012 hole-in-one added another layer to the legend of this par-5. Each ace here demonstrates the precise blend of skill and luck that defines Masters history. Every shot on Firethorn is a testament to the golfer's ability to navigate high stakes under immense pressure. Whether it's an iconic double eagle or a stunning hole-in-one, these moments encapsulate the essence of Masters magic. Redbud, known for its dramatic hole locations, often delivers excitement, especially on Sundays. Tiger Woods' chip-in birdie in 2005 stands out as a legendary Masters moment. But it's not just the legends that make Redbud special; amateurs and young pros have also left their mark here. Every hole-in-one during the Masters only adds to the allure and history of this iconic hole. The unmistakable roar from the crowd when a hole-in-one is made at Redbud echoes through Augusta National, creating memories that spectators cherish. Whether it's seasoned champions or promising newcomers, these magical moments contribute to the rich tapestry of Masters lore. Nandina and Redbud, iconic holes at Augusta National, are celebrated for their difficulty and historic holes-in-one by legends like Tiger Woods and Jack Nicklaus. Each Masters Tournament raises anticipation for new holes-in-one, captivating fans with the hope of witnessing these unforgettable moments. From Bobby Jones to modern greats, these shots signify skill, precision, and luck, enriching the Masters' legacy. The allure of these holes grows yearly as fans eagerly watch top players attempt to make their mark. A hole-in-one at Augusta National showcases exceptional talent and adds a unique chapter to golf's prestigious event, keeping the Masters' excitement alive. Holly closes the round with a challenging drive and precise approach. Its uphill fairway and green-side bunkers add pressure. Many Masters champions secured victory here, exemplifying the drama of the Tournament's final hole. Notably, the 16th hole, Redbud, is where several memorable holes-in-one have occurred, creating iconic moments in Masters history. These aces often alter the leaderboard dramatically, showcasing the unpredictability and excitement of the competition. The 16th hole's design, with its sloping green and strategically placed water hazard, makes accuracy paramount. Players like Tiger Woods in 2005 amazed spectators with their remarkable skill, securing unforgettable hole-in-ones. What hole do they skip at the Masters? One unique tradition is skipping balls over the pond at hole No. 16 during practice rounds. This fun challenge is said to have started in the late 1980s, with players like Ken Green and Mark Calcavecchia popularizing it, though there were earlier claims from golfers like Tom Kite. What is the shortest hole at Augusta? Golden Bell, the 12th hole, is the shortest at Augusta National, measuring just 155 yards. Despite its length, it is notoriously difficult due to swirling winds and the need to hit over Rae's Creek, making club selection quite challenging. Has anyone won all four majors in one year? No golfer has won all four majors in the same calendar year. However, Tiger Woods achieved the "Tiger Slam" by holding all four major titles simultaneously across the 2000-2001 seasons, with his fourth win being the 2001 Masters. Who is the oldest Masters winner ever? Jack Nicklaus holds the record as the oldest Masters winner. He claimed his sixth and final Masters victory in 1986 at the age of 46, adding to his tally of 18 major championships. How many different holes are there at the Masters? The Masters is held at Augusta National Golf Club's 18 holes. The tournament consists of four 18-hole rounds played from Thursday to Sunday, provided there are no weather delays. The Masters has always been a stage for extraordinary feats and unforgettable moments. Hole-in-ones, in particular, stand out as milestones that capture the essence of skill and luck in golf. Each hole at Augusta National offers its own set of challenges, making every ace a testament to a player's precision and nerve. Whether it's the demanding angles of Tea Olive or the strategic play required at Flowering Crab Apple, these iconic shots contribute to the enduring allure of the Masters. As players and fans eagerly anticipate future tournaments, the legacy of these remarkable hole-in-ones will continue to inspire and excite. With every tournament, new opportunities emerge for players to etch their names in history. From the storied 16th hole, known for its dramatic pin placements, to the deceptive par-3 12th, Golden Bell, each hole-in-one adds to the rich tapestry of the Masters. • Stewart Cink shocked the golf world Friday at the Masters, and he did it with his son by his side.At the par-3 16th hole of Augusta National, Cink lifted his tee shot up and then watched it bounce three times on the green. As the ball rolled toward the flag, the crowd began to murmur in anticipation. The ball kept rolling until it dropped in the cup. Cink became the 33rd golfer to make a hole-in-one at the Masters.HE CINKS IT!Stewart Cink delivers an ACE on No. 16 with his son caddying. pic.twitter.com/EEJFAwVyyU— GOLF on CBS (@GOLFonCBS) April 8, 2022MORE: Scottie Scheffler opens up big lead; Tiger Woods makes cutThe shot came on the same day as the birthday of his son, Reagan, who was caddying for him."Happy birthday," Cink told his son, according to The New York Times. "It's a pretty good present."Cink told Times that he tried to push the ball a little farther back from the hole because he knew it would wind up sliding down toward the flag. He said he knew right away that he hit the ball exactly how he wanted. "Usually a lot of times anyway, you hear it was kind of a mis-hit or whatever," Cink told the Times. "This was not a mis-hit. This was exactly the way I would have drawn it up. It was like a dream shot."MORE: Masters 2022 tee times, pairings, featured groups for Saturday's Round 3 at AugustaThe tournament had otherwise not gone as planned for Cink, who eventually missed the cut after finishing the first two rounds 7 over par."I'd throw the hole-in-one ball right in the water if I could make the cut and compete for two more rounds, but I'm missing the cut," Cink said, according to the Times. "That stings more than the hole-in-one. It doesn't boost my spirits like missing the cut hurts my spirits. I absolutely loathe not playing here on the weekend, and it hurts."Still, it was a moment of history on one of the prestigious golf courses in the world. Whose company does Cink now share? The Sporting News looks back at the history of aces at the Masters.MORE: Masters 2022 tee times, TV coverage, live stream & more to watch Saturday's Round 3Holes-in-one at the MastersThere have been 33 holes-in-ones at the Masters. They have happened most frequently at the par-3 16th, where there have been 23.Only five amateurs have sunk aces at the Masters: Ross Somerville at the 16th in 1934; Ray Billows at the 16th in 1940; John Dawson at the 16th in 1949; Billy Joe Patton at the sixth in 1954; and William Hyndman at the 12th in 1959.TIGER WOODS: Complete Round 2 results, highlights from 2022 Masters returnHoles-in-one at the Masters used to be fairly uncommon. Between the first tournament in 1934 and 2000, there were only 14 aces. Beginning in 2000, there have been 19 aces. There were multiple holes-in-one in 2004 (three), 2010 (two), 2012 (two), 2016 (three), 2019 (two) and 2021 (two). Before 2000, the only year with multiple holes-in-one was 1954.In 2021, Tommy Fleetwood sank one on the 16th and Corey Connors aced one on the sixth.Here's a look at all the aces at the Masters: Hole Year Golfer 4th 1992 Jeff Sluman 6th 1954 Billy Joe Patton (A) 6th 1954 Leland Gibson 6th 1972 Charles Coody 6th 2004 Chris DiMarco 6th 2013 Jamie Donaldson 6th 2021 Corey Connors 12th 1947 Claude Harmon 12th 1959 William Hyndman (A) 12th 1988 Curtis Strange 16th 1934 Ross Somerville (A) 16th 1935 Willie Goggin 16th 1940 Roy Billows (A) 16th 1949 John Dawson (A) 16th 1968 Clive Clark 16th 1992 Corey Pavin 16th 2004 Kirk Triplett 16th 2004 Padraig Harrington 16th 2005 Trevor Immelman 16th 2008 Ian Poulter 16th 2010 Nathan Green 16th 2010 Ryan Moore 16th 2012 Adam Scott 16th 2012 Bo Van Pelt 16th 2016 Davis Love III 16th 2016 Louis Oosthuizen 16th 2016 Shane Lowry 16th 2017 Matt Kuchar 16th 2018 Charley Hoffman 16th 2019 Bryson DeChambeau 16th 2019 Justin Thomas 16th 2021 Tommy Fleetwood 16th 2022 Stewart Cink How many golfers have made a hole-in-one during The Masters? Through 2018, there have been 29 aces made in The Masters, by 29 different golfers. On this page we list Masters holes-in-one first chronologically, and lower on the page we list them by hole. In-between are some notes and trivia on Masters aces. 1934 Masters-Ross Somerville, 16th hole, 145 yards with a mashie niblick 1935 MastersWillie Goggin, 16th hole, 145 yards with a spade mashie 1940 Mastersa-Ray Billows, 16th hole, 145 yards with an 8-iron 1947 MastersClaude Harmon, 12th hole, 155 yards with a 7-iron 1949 MastersJohn Dawson, 16th hole, 190 yards with a 4-iron 1954 MastersLeland Gibson, sixth hole, 190 yards with a 4-irona-Billy Joe Patton, sixth hole, 190 yards with a 5-iron 1959 Mastersa-William Hyndman, 12th hole, 155 yards with a 5-iron 1968 MastersClive Clark, 16th hole, 190 yards with a 2-iron 1972 Masters Charles Coody, sixth hole, 190 yards with a 5-iron 1988 MastersCurtis Strange, 12th hole, 155 yards with a 7-iron 1992 MastersJeff Sluman, fourth hole, 213 yards with a 4-ironCorey Pavin, 16th hole, 140 yards with an 8-iron 1996 Masters Raymond Floyd, 16th hole, 182 yards with a 5-iron 2004 MastersChris DiMarco, sixth hole, 198 yards with a 5-ironPadraig Harrington, 16th hole, 177 yards with a 6-ironKirk Triplett, 16th hole, 177 yards with a 6-iron 2005 MastersTrevor Immelman, 16th hole, 177 yards with a 7-iron 2008 MastersIan Poulter, 16th hole, 169 yards with an 8-iron 2010 MastersNathan Green, 16th hole, 176 yards with a 6-ironRyan Moore, 16th hole, 176 yards with a 7-iron 2012 MastersBo Van Pelt, 16th hole, 202 yards with a 6-ironAdam Scott, 2012, 190 yards with a 5-ironChris DiMarco, 2004, 198 yards with a 5-irona-Jamie Donaldson, 2013, 177 yards with a 7-ironHole No. 12Claude Harmon, 1947, 155 yards with a 7-irona-William Hyndman, 1959, 155 yards with a 6-ironCurtis Strange, 1988, 155 yards with a 7-iron Hole No. 16a-Ross Somerville, 1934, 145 yards with a spade mashiea-Ray Billows, 1940, 145 yards with an 8-irona-John Dawson, 1949, 190 yards with a 4-ironClive Clark, 1968, 190 yards with a 2-ironCorey Pavin, 1992, 140 yards with an 8-ironRaymond Floyd, 1996, 182 yards with a 5-ironPadraig Harrington, 2004, 177 yards with a 6-ironKirk Triplett, 2004, 177 yards with a 6-ironTrevor Immelman, 2005, 177 yards with a 7-ironIan Poulter, 2008, 169 yards with an 8-ironNathan Green, 2010, 176 yards with a 6-ironRyan Moore, 2010, 176 yards with a 7-ironBo Van Pelt, 2012, 202 yards with a 6-ironAdam Scott, 2012, 202 yards with a 7-ironShane Lowry, 2016, 181 yards with an 8-ironDavis Love III, 2016, 181 yards with a 7-ironLouis Oosthuizen, 2016, 181 yards with a 7-ironCharley Hoffman, 2018, 173 yards with a 7-ironBryson DeChambeau, 2019, 173Justin Thomas, 2019