There's nothing quite like the smell of a Whopper sizzling on the grill, right? But when you're out exploring the world, you might find yourself asking: where can you actually get a Burger King? It's a fast-food giant, sure, but it doesn't have the same global reach as McDonald's. Let's dive into the flame-grilled realm of Burger King and take a look at the countries that have embraced the King - and those that haven't. To read about the Great Hungry Jacks War click here. Burger King is the second-largest fast-food burger chain in the world, proudly operating in over 100 countries and territories. That's nothing to scoff at, but McDonald's still reigns supreme with a bigger global footprint. As of 2024, Burger King boasts around 19,000 locations worldwide, with a presence spanning from the Americas to Asia and even parts of Africa. But, like most fast-food chains, the Burger King empire has its limits. You won't find those flame-grilled burgers just anywhere, and in some places, they've come and gone. You wouldn't expect it, but Burger King landed in Iraq as early as the 2000s. It started with American military bases, but now you can grab a Whopper in a few key cities like Baghdad and Erbil. While still limited in its expansion, it's a symbol of how fast food finds its way into even the most war-torn regions. This tiny country, home to the Pope, might seem like an odd location for a fast-food chain, but there's a Burger King just outside the Vatican walls. Catering mostly to tourists, it's a quick stop for those wanting something a bit more familiar after a day of visiting St. Peter's Basilica. You can read about the Vatican here. In a small but growing market, Burger King launched its first restaurant in Armenia in 2017. It's part of the fast-food boom happening in this part of the Caucasus, and while you can get your Whopper, don't expect too many variations just yet. No, not the American state. Burger King has been making steady progress in the Republic of Georgia, a country at the crossroads of Europe and Asia. Interestingly, McDonald's entered Georgia before Burger King, but both now compete fiercely for the fast-food throne. Though McDonald's has mysteriously avoided Cambodia, Burger King jumped into the market with a vengeance. It's now one of the few global fast-food chains operating in the Kingdom, with restaurants scattered across Phnom Penh. It's become quite popular, especially with the younger crowd. You can read about the Best Burger in Phnom Penh here. Not a huge shocker, but no, Burger King hasn't yet penetrated the hermit kingdom. Although there have been whispers over the years of fast food making its way into Pyongyang, it seems we're a long way from grabbing a Whopper on Kim Jong Un's turf. You can though get a burger in Pyongyang. Despite Nepal's booming tourism industry, Burger King hasn't opened its doors here yet. McDonald's and KFC are also missing from the scene, leaving local chains and independent burger joints to rule the market. To read about communism in Nepal click here. Iceland made waves when McDonald's pulled out of the country during the 2008 financial crisis.
But guess what? Burger King hasn't made a comeback either. Locals don't seem to miss it much, and smaller, locally sourced burger king outlets back in 2002. The reason? It wasn't profitable enough, and the public didn't really take to the fast-food culture. It's now one of the few countries in South America where Burger King hasn't re-entered the market. Despite its growing economy and interest from international businesses, Ghana remains without a Burger King hasn't re-entered the market. financial meltdown led to McDonald's and Burger King shutting their doors for good. These days, locals take pride in supporting their homegrown burger joints, so don't expect either chain to return soon. Lebanon had its fair share of Burger King outlets, but a mix of political instability, economic troubles, and competition led to the chain withdrawing For now, the Lebanese have to make do with local burger chains and KFC, which is still holding on. Israel once had a thriving Burger Ranch, a homegrown competitor. This led to the disappearance of the Burger King brand, although rumors of a return have circulated for years. With the country's economic collapse, fast-food chains like Burger King have struggled to stay afloat. While there are still a few locations, many have closed their doors due to hyperinflation and supply chain issues. Like McDonald's, Burger King also has the unique honor of having operated in countries that no longer exist. The most iconic example? Yugoslavia. Back in the day, Yugoslavia had both Burger King and McDonald's may have a bigger global reach, Burger King's flame-grilled empire is still going strong in over 100 countries. Whether you're in a bustling city or a remote island nation, there's a good chance you can find a Whopper somewhere nearby - but don't be too surprised if the King hasn't made it to your travel destination just yet. So, next time you're wandering the streets of Phnom Penh or Baghdad, keep an eye out for the familiar red and yellow logo - and grab yourself a flame-grilled taste of home. Countries of Europe with Burger King began its expansion in Europe in 1976 at the Kurfürstendamm in West Berlin. In 1990, an East German branch was opened in the town of Dresden. In December 2012, BK returned to the French market, based on an agreement with multinational operator Autogrill, [80] a move that has met with some excitement in the country, [81][82] In July 1997, it was announced the chain would be leaving the country, closing its 22 franchised and 17 corporate locations, after a poorly executed entry into the market that left it unable to compete against McDonald's and local chain Quick.[83][84] The partnership with Autogrill is a move to consolidate BK's presence in travel plazas along major highways in France, Italy, Poland and other European nations.[85] In late 2013, BK returned to Finland after three decades of absence. This caused so much interest that people had to stand in queue for half an hour just to get in. In November 2013, Groupe Bertrand, who owns several restaurant franchises, acquired the BK master franchises acquired the BK master franchises.

queued in front of the restaurant to get in, sometimes for over half an hour. The only exception so far has been Christmas time, when the restaurant has attracted over 2000 customers on every single day, which has surprised the restaurant employees and the franchise owners. The long queues have been extensively covered and ridiculed in social media, comparing them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them with the nearly 1990s, and contrasting them with the nearly 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them with the nearly 1990s, and contrasting them with the nearly 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting them to people queuing in front of a McDonald's restaurant in Moscow in the early 1990s, and contrasting the early 1990s, and contrasting the early 1990s, and 1990s, a

Found from the intertidal zone to a depth of 30 m (100 ft), this species is common throughout the tropical Indian and western Pacific Oceans in nearshore, coral reef-associated habitats. It is a fairly small ray, not exceeding 35 cm (14 in) in width, with a mostly smooth, oval pectoral fin disc, large protruding eyes, and a relatively short and thick tail with a deep fin fold underneath. It can be easily identified by its striking color pattern of many electric blue spots on a yellowish background, with a

CEO Bill Kramer remarked that they looked "to deliver an exciting and energized show" with Weiss and Kirshner. [26] Two months later, comedian and talk show host Jimmy Kimmel was announced as host of the gala. "Being invited to host the Oscars for a third time is either a great honor or a trap," Kimmel stated in a press release regarding his selection. "Either way, I am grateful to the Academy for asking me so quickly after everyone good said no", he concluded.[27] Furthermore, AMPAS announced that all 23 categories would be presented live during the gala. The announcement came in response to an internal survey which indicated negative feedback regarding the previous year's decision to present eight below-the-line categories prior to the live portion of last year's gala.[28] In light of the Chris Rock-Will Smith slapping incident during the previous year's telecast, AMPAS announced that the organization hired a "crisis team" in the event a similar altercation or if an unexpected fiasco arose.[29] In an interview published by Time magazine, Kramer explained: "We have a whole crisis team, something we've never had before, and many plans in place. We've run many scenarios. So it is our hope that we will be prepared for anything that we may not anticipate right now but that we're planning for just in case it does happen."[30] The Dolby Theatre stage on the day of the ceremony Several others participated in the production of the ceremony and related events. Rickey Minor served as musical director for the ceremony. [31] Production designers Misty Buckley and Alana Billingsley, who were the first women-led design team for an Oscars telecast, designed a new stage for the show. [32] According to Buckley and Billingsley, the stage was designed to resemble Art Deco movie places from the Golden Age of Hollywood. [33] Additionally, the set utilized several LED panels that were used to display the category names, winners' names, or images from the nominated films. [34] Notably, the arrivals area along Hollywood Boulevard outside the Dolby Theatre was lined with a champagne-colored carpet, marking the first time since the 32nd ceremony in 1960 that a non-red colored carpet was utilized for the gala. According to red carpet to not clash with a sienna-colored tent erected to shield attendees from the sun or potential rain. She also added that the shades of color for both the carpet and tent were inspired by "watching the sunset on a white-sand beach at the 'golden hour' with a glass of champagne in hand, evoking calm and peacefulness".[35] Lady Gaga was initially not scheduled to perform her nominated song "Hold My Hand" from Top Gun: Maverick due to prior commitments involving her role in Joker: Folie à Deux. On the morning of the ceremony, however, it was reported that Gaga would perform at the ceremony. [36] Meanwhile, actress Glenn Close, who was originally scheduled as a presenter during the gala, canceled her appearance due to a positive COVID-19 test. [37] When the nominations were announced, nine of the ten films nominated for Best Picture had earned a combined gross of $1.57 billion at the American and Canadian box offices at the time. Top Gun: Maverick was the highest-grossing film among the Best Picture nominees with $718.7 million in domestic box office receipts.[38] Avatar: The Way of Water came in second with $598.4 million; this was followed by Elvis ($151 million), The Banshees of Inisherin ($9 million), The Banshees of Inisherin ($9 million), The Banshees of Inisherin ($1.1 million), The B due to their distributor Netflix's policy of refusing to release such figures. [39] Furthermore, by virtue of Avatar: The Way of Water and Top Gun: Maverick's Best Picture nominations, it marked the first time since the 55th ceremony in 1983 that the two highest grossing films of the year were both nominated in the aforementioned category. Riseborough's Best Actress nomination for To Leslie was controversial amongst critics and pundits, as Momentum Pictures, the film. Instead, director Michael Morris and his wife, actress Mary McCormack, organized a "celeb-backed campaign" to get Riseborough nominated.[41][42] They contacted friends and colleagues in the entertainment industry, asking them to view the film and share it with others if they enjoyed it.[43] Morris and Riseborough's profile; dozens of celebrities praised her performance on social media, and some hosted screenings of the film during voting for the Academy Award nominations in January 24, which the Los Angeles Times called "one of the most shocking nominations in Oscar history".[43] After her nomination was announced, speculation arose that the tactics might have violated AMPAS rules against directly lobbying voters. [46] A post on the film's Instagram account was noted by several AMPAS members for possibly violating a rule prohibiting "[singling] out 'the competition' by name" by featuring a quote from film critic Richard Roeper, who praised Riseborough's performance as better than Cate Blanchett's in Tár, a fellow nominee for Best Actress.[47] On January 27, the Academy announced a review of the guidelines may be needed in a new era of social media and digital communication".[48]
 The Academy has rescinded nominations for nominees who participated in unsanctioned campaigning. However, there were no reports that Riseborough had been involved in such, or that any Academy members had lodged formal complaints about the campaign's behavior. [48] On January 31, the Academy concluded its review by pledging to address
 "social media and outreach campaigning tactics" which they said caused "concern", but confirming that Riseborough's nomination would be retained.[49] Following the controversy, the Academy introduced new campaigning rules and clarifications in May 2023.[50] Variety columnist Owen Gleiberman wrote: "It didn't rock the boat, it didn't overstay its welcome, and it left you feeling that the world's preeminent awards show, all doom-saying punditry to the contrary, is still, on balance, a very good thing." He also added that the world's preeminent awards show, all doom-saying punditry to the contrary, is still, on balance, a very good thing." praised the show's emotional beats and found its flaws "were mitigated more gracefully than just about any Oscars telecast" he could recall.[52] Mick LaSalle of the San Francisco Chronicle commended Kimmel's stint as host stating: "He was establishing that 2023 would not be a repeat of 2022 — and it wasn't. It was such a relief to see something, anything, actually get better."[53] Mike Hale of The New York Times remarked on "the ordinariness and sameness of the ABC broadcast" compared to the prior year,[54] while USA Today's Kelly Lawler criticized it as "terribly fake" and felt that Kimmel's role "felt phoned in, or at least maybe monitored by corporate overlords looking to avoid controversy" despite some of his jokes tackling controversial subjects such as the January 6 United States Capitol attack and Tom Cruise's Scientology advocacy. [55] Hale added that "the modern Oscars have become something more to be endured than enjoyed". [54] The American telecast on ABC drew in an average of 18.75 million people over its length, which was a 13% increase from the previous year's ceremony and marked the first time that the Academy Awards in 2014.[3] The show also earned higher Nielsen ratings compared to the previous ceremony with 9.9% of households watching the ceremony.
[56] In addition, it garnered a higher 18-49 demo rating with a 4.03 rating among viewers in that demographic.[57] It was the most-watched prime time entertainment broadcast of 2023 in the United States.[58] In July 2023, the broadcast was nominated for three awards at the 75th Primetime Creative Arts Emmys but failed to win in any of the categories for which it was nominated.[59][60] The annual "In Memoriam" segment was introduced by John Travolta.
