"Suddenly he stumbled against Frodo, who was losing his mind, looking at the pale lights. Her hands hung rigidly on her sides; water and sludge were dripping from them. Come, Mr. Frodo! "said Sam. 'Don't look at them! Gollum says we shouldn't. Let's continue with him and get out of this cursed place as fast as possible - if we can!' A" "All right", said Frodo, as if he had been returned from a dream. "They are found in all the pools, pale faces, deep deep under the dark water. I have seen them: front and wicked, and noble and sad faces. Many proud and fair faces and weeds in their silver hair. "I have seen them: front and wicked, and noble and sad faces. [2] During the battle on the plains more than half of the elves of LothlÃ3rien under the command of King Malgalad were led into the dead swamps. [3] After the battle Many of the killed were buried outside the swamp area but over time (in the third age) the swamps had grown and swallowed up the graves. [1] In ta In 1944 King Ondoher of Gondoro was captured by the aggressors into the dead swamps. [4] However, after EãÂärnil II won the battle of the camp, those of the Wainriders who were not killed in the fight were dragged into the dead marshes [6] and brought him to Mirkwood. The dead swamps of Inger Edelfeldt after Frodo and Sam had met Gollum in Emyn Muil (February 29, 3019 [7]), revealed to have found a hidden way through the swamps. [8] The three took the passage of Gollum and on March 1 [7] began to cross the marshes, where they saw candles and lights dancing. Frodo was mesmerized by the lights and tried to reach and touch the faces of the dead, at the bottom of the swamps. Gollum told them that the dead could not be touched, suggesting that he once tried to eat them. [1] They completed the passage the next day and continued on their way to the Morannon.
